Baton Rouge Reported Peaceful

Louisiana Negroes End Walk To Capital

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Hundreds of Negroes and Ku Klux Klansmen rallied on opposite ends of this state capital Saturday night while state police and the National Guard watched out for trouble. It was a tense ending for a 106-mile protest march which caused Louisiana's mightiest display of force in a racial confrontation.

The city was peaceful — if uneasily so. Authorities were concerned most about possible conflict today, when Negroes and Klan groups planned parades and rallies on the capitol grounds.

A column of Negroes 130 strong completed the 10-day trek from Bogalusa, La., late Saturday by slogging through heavy rainfall to a slum area five miles inside Baton Rouge.

Three hundred Negroes gathered after nightfall in a junior high school where the march halted.

Lincoln Lynch, associate national director of the Congress of Racial Equality, told some 200 Negroes in the school gymnasium that if Guardsmen had not protected the marchers Friday "blood would have been flowing in the streets—that's not only Negro blood but white blood too." He added, "The white power structure is scared to death."

Miles away, on the south side of town, more than 400 Ku Klux Klansmen held their rally. Many wore hoods.

"Burn, baby, burn," yelled Imperial Wizard Jack Helm of the Universal Klans of America as he touched fire to a Viet Cong flag and a 40-foot cross.

Helm told the Klansmen none of his men were near the march when it went through KKK strongholds in Livingston Parish. The Negroes should have been ignored he said.

"They had 3,000 National Guardsmen protect eight niggers," hooted Helm. Noting that another Klan group planned to parade to the capitol steps Sunday, Helm said, "I don't want any of my men there."

The last leg of the march was begun by 10 Negroes at the city limits in the early afternoon.

BUS RIDERS

Some 30 Negroes arrived in a bus alongside the marchers and joined the ranks. Ahead of the column 50 singing, clapping Negroes waited beneath an overpass, merging with the marchers as they passed. Others got in step as the column penetrated Negro neighborhoods.

The army of National Guardsmen who protected the walkers Friday was not to be seen.

Few whites gathered to watch. Those who did looked on from buildings well back from the road—and out of the rain. No one heckled.

The guardsmen were mustered hurriedly by Gov. John McKeithen to escort the Negroes Friday out of neighboring Livingston Parish, after two days of racial scuffles in the Ku Klux Klan stronghold indicated a crisis was imminent.

Saturday the Guardsmen were deployed throughout the city but out of sight. State Adjutant Gen. Erbon Wise said they were available for any emergency.

Gov. McKeithen warned in a statewide telecast Friday night that 1,000 Guardsmen, in addition to those used earlier, would be mobilized if rioting occurs following Negro and Ku Klux Klan rallies planned in separate sections of the city Saturday night and Sunday.

McKeithen said the National Guard "will be supplied with live ammunition if we have a riot, or looting or burning, and will be instructed to shoot quick."

The governor said the real test for the state will come Sunday, when the Klan planned to parade through Baton Rouge to the capitol, where Negroes planned to gather earlier for a speech by Black Power disciple H. Rap Brown.

"I hope to make my position completely clear," said McKeithen. "When they start looting, pillaging and burning peoples' homes, there will be a few people killed real quick. Then the riot will be over."

Jailed Rap Brown Finds Bail Scarce In New York

NEW YORK (AP) — H. Rap Brown remained in jail on a federal gun charge Saturday night as the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee said no professional bondsmen was willing to put up the $25,000 needed for his release.

A SNCC spokesman said nearly $10,000 in cash had been raised and that the sum usually demanded by bondsmen for $25,000 bail was $2,500.

The 23-year-old Black Power leader and SNCC chairman was arrested at 2 a.m. Saturday outside a friend's Manhattan apartment and put in the Federal House of Detention.

Brown's lawyer appealed for reduction of the bail, set by U.S. Commissioner Earl N. Bishop, but the move was turned down by Federal Judge Inzer Wyatt, who denied that the bail violated Brown's constitutional rights.

"All of this convinces us," SNCC said in a statement, "that there is a definite conspiracy to illegally keep Rap Brown in prison."

SNCC also charged that U.S. commissioners, who would have to receive any bond money, were "making themselves unavailable for the release of Mr. Brown."

Brown's lawyer applied for reduction of the bail, set by U.S. Commissioner Earl N. Bishop, but the move was turned down by Federal Judge Inzer Wyatt, who denied that the bail violated Brown's constitutional rights.

Brown was charged with carrying a semiautomatic carbine on an airline flight from New Orleans to New York while under indictment, a violation of the federal Firearms Act punishable by up to five years in jail and a $2,000 fine. He is under indictment in Maryland on charges of arson, rioting and inciting to riot.

When arrested, Brown was not armed, but federal agents said they later searched the apartment with a warrant and found a gun in a plastic bag with a "banana" clip of 31 bullets. A carbine is a light, short-barreled rifle.

Asst. U.S. Atty. Stephen E. Kaufman said Brown was seen carrying the weapon in Baton Rouge, La., Thursday and also was seen buying ammunition.

When airline agents in New Orleans asked him Friday if he was carrying a gun, Brown replied yes and turned a rifle in a plastic bag over to an agent for transportation during his flight to New York the complaint said.

Kunstler said that the gun was always in his plastic case. "If he had a gun, he had it to protect himself in Louisiana," said the defense attorney.

Brown was wounded by a shotgun blast three weeks ago in Cambridge, Md., Kunstler stated.

He called the $25,000 bail "outrageous" in view of the possible penalties.

U.S. Planes Hit Coast Of Vietnam

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. warplanes ranged along the southern coast of North Vietnam Saturday striking blows at Communist supply lines. Pilots reported destroying or damaging more than 100 cargo barges and tearing up two truck convoys.

POOR WEATHER

Poor weather kept U.S. aircraft away from the immediate vicinity of Hanoi and Haiphong and raids were concentrated on the southern panhandle stretching south from Hanoi to the 17th parallel that divides North and South Vietnam.

The U.S. Command reported the ground war at a virtual standstill Sunday. But Communist gunners shot down two U.S. helicopters over South Vietnam Saturday, killing one American and wounding three others.

While the U.S. fighter-bombers were raking North Vietnam, B52 bombers that can carry up to 30 tons of bombs mounted a second raid in less than 24 hours Saturday night on a major North Vietnamese fixed base in the A Shau Valley in the northwestern corner of South Vietnam.

Carrier-based U.S. Navy pilots reported destroying 21 cargo barges and damaging 74. Air Force pilots said they destroyed or damaged another 18, including three large barges on a river 26 miles northwest of Dong Hoi.

That made the day's toll 113 river barges sunk or damaged compared to 108 reported Friday.

Air Force F4 Phantom fighter-bombers were credited with destroying four camouflaged trucks four miles west-northwest of Dong Hoi in other raids Saturday. Other Air Force pilots raked a truck convoy six miles west of Dong Hoi and pilots reported destroying a number of the vehicles.

Navy pilots reported heavy damage in a raid on the Long Dan transshipment point, 25 miles south-southeast of Vinh. The eight-engined B52 Stratofortress, following up on a pre-dawn raid Saturday, pounded major infiltration routes, storage areas, way stations and troop concentrations located eight miles east-southeast of A Shau. It was the fourth raid since Wednesday night on the A Shau Valley in an attempt to thwart any possible Communist offensive that may be in the works.

In the ground war Saturday, U.S. Marines used riot control gas to flush four Viet Cong suspects from a tunnel in hills 27 miles southwest of Da Nang.

The explosion of a grenade bearing chemical that induced tears and nausea caused three men and a woman to crawl out of their hiding place after they had spured orders from Leath-erneckes of the 5th Marine Regiment to surrender.

Associated Press photographer Rick Merron, who was on the scene, said a search of the tunnel by masked Marines yielded field packs, canteens and ammunition for a Communist assault rifle.

Highlights of other developments: —U.S. pilots flew a near-record 186 multiple missions Friday in the recently expanded air war against North Vietnam. This was second only to the record of 197 missions set Aug. 3. Communist supply lines were the prime targets.

In a periodic updating of aerial losses in the war, the U.S. Command said 2,573 planes and helicopters had been destroyed from all causes. Planes downed in combat over North Vietnam totaled 647, over South Vietnam 199.

Three oil trucks exploded in the early hours of the fire, which broke out about 1:30 a.m. near a loading ramp in the sub-pot of the Caltex Oil Co., a subsidiary of the U.S.-owned New England Petroleum Co.

More than 200 firemen raked the blaze through pools of oil, raked Saturday.

Six Killed At Coshatta

COUSHATTA, La. (AP) — Two cars collided head-on atop a hill north of here Saturday, killing six persons and seriously injuring another.

State police said the dead in one car were Joaquin F. Medrano, 54, of Irving, Tex.; his son Mike, 41; and Mrs. Nicolsa F. Medrano of Dallas.

Killed in the other vehicle were Charles J. Addison, 29, of Greensburg, La.; Charles Duna Jr., 27; and Shirley Ann Hayes, 23, both of Granbling, La.

The only survivor was Elnora Medrano, whose husband and son were killed in the wreck. She was rushed to a Shreveport hospital where her condition was listed as "guarded."

The wreck happened six miles north of this northwest Louisiana town.

Investigators said the wreck was so scattered it was impossible to determine in which direction each car was heading. Neither could they learn which car crossed the centerline.

Viet Cong Plans Terror Campaign To Disrupt Vote

Gasoline, Oil-Fed Fire Flaming Out Of Control

MONTREAL (AP) — Fire surged out of control at a Montreal gasoline and fuel oil depot Saturday, sending hundreds of thousands of gallons of petroleum products up in thick, black smoke.

Officials said the fire, which broke out before dawn, was contained to a half-city block area but was still out of control and would probably burn for a day or two until the blazing fuel was consumed.

The flames and smoke rolled hundreds of feet into the air and were visible for many miles Saturday night. Vacationers at Expo 67, about four miles from the fire, could see the blaze from parts of the world's fair site.

Thousands of weary firemen sprayed tons of water to cool a 3.5 million gallon gasoline tank situated near two huge burning oil tanks, one holding five million gallons and another with 135,000 gallons.

A storage company official estimated 5.5 million gallons of petroleum products would be lost.

One oil tank blew up shortly before noon, hospitalizing one fireman with severe burns. Six others were scalded and required treatment.

Foes Discover Howard Makes Tough Enemy

BURLINGTON, Iowa (AP) — All his life Jimmie Howard has been known as a tough competitor.

His opponents found that out when he was committing cultural mischief upon them as an all-state tackle on the state championship Burlington High School football team.

More of them learned it the hard way competing against him in track, when Howard was a high school distance runner.

North Koreans and Chinese Reds found Howard a rugged man to beat during the Korean War, when he earned the Silver Star for gallantry in action.

And now, Marine Gunnery Sgt. Jimmie Howard, 38, will be awarded a Medal of Honor for teaching the same hard lesson to the Viet Cong in Vietnam.

Howard will receive his medal, the nation's highest military decoration, Monday from President Johnson in a White House ceremony in Washington.

Proudly watching will be his wife and six children, his mother and stepfather, Mr. and Mrs. George Schneider of Sperry, Iowa.

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. officials reported preliminary evidence Saturday of Viet Cong plans to mount a terror campaign aimed at disrupting the September election in South Vietnam.

Communist harassment could include attempts to assassinate opposition candidates and blame the killings on the present military regime whose leaders are running for office, the officials said.

Chief of State Nguyen Van Thieu and Prime Minister Nguyen Cao Ky are the front-runners in a field also including 10 civilian states. The civilian candidates have been accusing the government of sabotaging their campaigns.

Washington authorities believe the murder last Dec. 7 of a leading anti-tantra member of the Constituent Assembly, Tran Van Van, was the work of the Viet Cong. And they say some 30 candidates were assassinated during last spring's election of 13,000 South Vietnamese to local offices.

The officials said a number of recent Viet Cong defectors and prisoners reported having received orders to disrupt the national governmental elections slated for Sept. 3.

This—plus Communist broadcasts condemning the elections, and the past pattern of Viet Cong tactics—has led Washington authorities to expect a wave of terrorist acts during the final few days of the political campaign.

It is anticipated that the harassment will be aimed both at candidates and at keeping voters away from the polls.

The officials also told newsmen: —The U.S. government is taking no position on whether the elections should be postponed a month, as proposed by Sen. Jacob K. Javits, D-N.Y., and some of the South Vietnamese civilian candidates.

However, the South Vietnamese campaign appears to be quite active in the few weeks allotted for politicking. The election machinery is geared to the Sept. 3 date, and it would be difficult to postpone.

—The American ambassador at Saigon, Ellsworth Bunker, was not interfering in South Vietnamese internal affairs with his Wednesday statement terming the election campaign fair so far. Civilian candidate Tran Van Huong has charged Bunker with siding with the military regime against allegations of government harassment.

The officials said Bunker was trying to put the South Vietnamese political charges and countercharges in proper perspective for Americans unfamiliar with South Vietnamese campaigning.

Mounted Police Question Man

CALGARY, Alta. (AP) — Royal Canadian Mounted Police announced Saturday they were questioning a man in connection with the slaying of nine members of the James Earl Ray family last Tuesday at their farm home near Shell Lake, Sask.

A spokesman declined to say if the man had any connection with Saskatchewan or had been in that province recently but "if we have to, we'll find everybody who was in Saskatchewan in the last few days."

He also declined to say whether the man being questioned had been picked up as a result of a request from Saskatchewan.

Peterson, 47, his wife Evelyn, 42, and their children, ranging in ages from 1 to 17, were found shot to death by a neighbor who called at their farm home.

The schedule isn't set, but one proposal is to make it coincide with Burlington's football opener Sept. 15 against arch-rival Waterloo East High.

"I'd love that," said Howard when informed of the tentative plan. "I haven't seen the old team play since I left school."

For Mrs. Schneider, the prospect of meeting President Johnson at the Washington ceremony is "wonderful."

Arabs Debate Stiff Moves On Oil Firms

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A Pan Arab economic conference in Baghdad debated drastic measures against the United States and Britain Saturday amid reports it had agreed on gradual nationalization of U.S. and British-owned oil companies in the Arab world.

Reports received here said lack of agreement on other tougher measures might force the 29 finance, economy and oil ministers from 13 Arab states to refer the more thorny resolutions to an Arab summit conference planned for later this month or early September.

The reports said the economic conference might be convened again after the summit for discussions in the light of "new guidance" from the Arab chiefs of state.

Two Children Die In Wreck

TALLULAH, La. (AP) — Two young children were killed Saturday when an eastbound car skidded on wet pavement and collided with an oncoming car midway between the Mississippi River bridge and Tallulah on U.S. 80. Two persons were critically injured.

The dead were Michelle Durham, 3, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William W. Durham of Eudora, Ark.; and Lisa Kay Spears, 1, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Grady Spears of Monroe.

Bill Durham, 6, and Mrs. Spears were critically injured. They were taken to a Vicksburg, Miss., hospital.

Counter Checks Set To Be Retired Soon

Automation is about to retire from use an old, familiar item of monetary exchange — the counter check.

In case you haven't seen one lately — and they're getting harder to find — a counter check is one on which you can insert any bank name.

For some time now most banks have been discouraging their use in favor of the personalized check, the kind that has your bank's and your own name printed on it along with some rather odd looking numbers across the bottom. Those numbers are the important item. They identify both the bank and your individual account and they're printed in special magnetic ink which can be "read" by a machine. The machine sorts the thousands of checks handled daily, routing each canceled check to the bank on which it was drawn and, later, to the individual's account with that bank.

The system is a lot faster than having people read bank names and signatures. Particularly some signatures.

Counter checks, of course, don't have these magnetic symbols. They must be handled the old-fashioned way.

Now, the Federal Reserve Bank System, through which many checks pass from one bank to another, has announced a policy which permits coded items only. This means a lot of extra work by local banks to put the proper code on every counter check processed.

They hope to avoid it with a public educational program. For several years now they have supplied coded checks to all customers. The programs will encourage their use and, in particular, ask the cooperation of merchants to stop supplying counter checks to their customers.

Advertising and in-store display material is built around the theme. "Checking has changed." The message notes the greater safety of having both a signature and an account number on your checks, along with making a direct request to avoid use of counter checks.

Signers will appear before regular associations and other groups to explain the importance of this program.

Merchants have a direct interest in the program for two reasons. Hand coding will delay posting of funds to their accounts. 50 per cent of checks which banks refuse for insufficient funds or similar reasons are written on counter checks.

A reduction in use of counter checks should reduce the number of "bad" checks cashed by merchants.

Local bank officials are optimistic. One noted, "We've come a long way in making checks more attractive by personalizing them, printing them on various colored papers and offering stylish covers. When the public recognizes our problem, I think we'll get cooperation."

Most everyone is conscious of rising costs these days and is willing to help keep costs down for people they do business with.

Asked what would happen if the public doesn't cooperate, the official said, "We can't tell until we know our costs of handling non-coded checks. But it could mean a service charge to the customer, similar to the old 'exchange' charge we had for many years on checks drawn on out-of-town banks. Obviously, we hope that won't be necessary."

No Scenery Necessary For Lone Pro

It's difficult to imagine a theatrical production that carries no scenery, has a cast of only two, requires a traveling stage crew of only one, has grossed more than $20,000,000 in 13 years and been proclaimed hilariously funny around the world. Such a show does exist — the only one in the history of the performing arts — and it is Victor Borge's "Comedy in Music."

Victor Borge and his partner, former N.Y. Philharmonic official pianist Leonid Hambro, will appear as the premiere performance in the Monroe Civic Center Theatre on Sept. 9.

Scenery for this uniquely funny musical entertainment is not necessary, because "Comedy in Music" is in concert form. Its coming has been anticipated by the Civic Center months in advance. The theatre stage will be ready, using its own heavy drapes, sound system and lights, and the two all-important grand pianos will be installed and tuned in advance.

The props, which Borge's stage manager carries with him in a suitcase, consist of two microphones, a spotlight and a tape recorder. The stage manager is the only crew. He arrives a few hours beforehand, does a quick run-through with lights and sound, and "Comedy in Music" is ready for its star performer to step into place.

Ed Sullivan said of Borge's show, "It is doubted that any lone 'pro' has ever so completely conquered the critics and his audiences as has Borge."

the people of Ward 1 and Ouachita Parish, just as I have always done.

"Ouachita parish, and particularly Ward 1, is growing fast and we need experienced men on the Police Jury. I have the experience for this work, and will put it to use for the people of my ward."

"I have always worked for Ward 1 and will continue to do so."

"I have always expressed interest in the garbage problem, which has faced the people in the smaller wards. This is a serious problem. I shall continue to work on this problem in the hope of eventually solving it to the benefit of the parish."

"I will appreciate the support and vote of the people of Ward 1 in the coming elections."

They sent their hats scaling into the air, hailed him as the wit-tiest individual ever seen on the metropolitan stage."

By doubling his cast, Borge has doubled the fun. His instrumental involvements on stage with Hambro have been aptly dubbed by one reviewer as "hilarious piano duels."

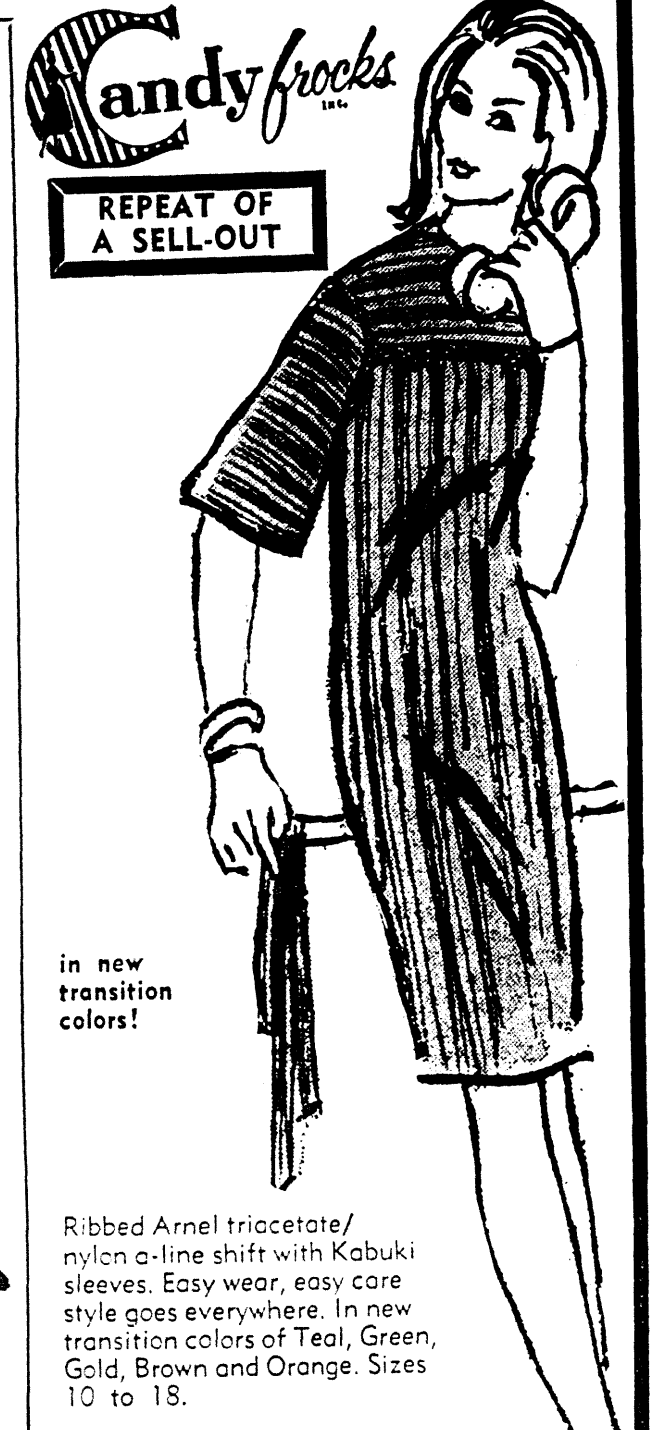

Tickets for "Comedy in Music" are now on sale at the Civic Center Box Office, Tuesday through Saturdays, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Senate Support For President Johnson's Vietnam War Course Sharply Eroded

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate support for President Johnson's Vietnam war course has eroded so sharply he apparently would be hard put to muster a majority for any broad endorsement of his Asian policies.

An Associated Press canvass which found 84 senators willing to express an opinion, either publicly or private, showed 44 willing to say they generally support what the President is doing, and 40 who disapprove of his actions for one reason or another.

A breakdown showed 27 Democrats and 17 Republicans backing the President. Those opposing his policies included 26 Democrats and 14 Republicans. Those who criticize the President do so for sharply contrasting reasons because they include both the most convinced doves and most militant hawks.

Thus, even though they list themselves as supporters, some hawks assert strongly their belief that Johnson should go all out militarily to bring the conflict to a swift and victorious conclusion.

On the other hand, the doves complain that Johnson is escalating the struggle dangerously by bombing near-China targets, is failing to get the South Vietnamese to do their share, and is leaving no opening for a negotiated peace.

The substance of the comments of individual senators indicates there is such widespread dissatisfaction with the way the war is going that it would be risky for the President to seek any formal endorsement of his position, as he did in the Gulf of Tonkin resolution in August, 1964.

In all the Congress, only Sens.

Wayne Morse, D-Ore., and Ernest Gruening, D-Alaska, voted against the 1964 resolution. But a number of senators, including Chairman J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, have said they would not support such a commitment now.

Still, there seems no likelihood that any attempt will be made to put into operation the machinery—noted by Johnson at his news conference Friday—that is available any time Congress wants to rescind its 1964 action.

Most of the senators had given their views to The Associated Press prior to the news conference in which Johnson noted the 1964 resolution could be rescinded by a simple majority vote in Congress, without the necessity for his approval of action.

Sen. Thomas J. McIntyre, D-N.H., said he still supported the President's course, "but I must admit that I'm shaken a little."

"The mood of the Senate is changing over Vietnam," he said. "It's becoming uneasy."

He said he was "shaken by the inability to catch the enemy, but the inability to get the message through to Hanoi with the bombing, by my rosy predictions of last February not coming true."

Sen. John O. Pastore, D-R.I., previously classed as a hawk, said: "I don't want to be put in the position of approving or disapproving our Vietnam policies."

"The country, the Senate, the intellectual community is split down the middle on this issue, and it is not a healthy sign."

"We're in this for a moral reason, and it can't be justified by immoral acts such as invasion of the north or intensified bombing. We're pledged to give the South Vietnamese a free choice, and that can't be had without a free election. The election must be free."

Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass., said he was discouraged by the way the war had been going but he put great store in the Vietnam elections.

"I stand practically where I did in March when I said that I reluctantly support our present military position in Vietnam," he said. "After the government is elected, I would hope there would be negotiations with the left and with Hanoi."

Another freshman senator, Howard Baker Jr., R-Tenn., said: "I won't express approval or disapproval, but I will express support. I have grave misgivings about the war from time to time, but I am not a military expert, and I won't put my judgment against that of the experts."

Sen. John G. Tower, R-Tex., made his reply to the canvass question — "Do you generally approve or disapprove of President Johnson's conduct of the Vietnam war?" — the occasion to announce he was leaving the ranks of those who approved to join those who disapproved.

He attacked what he called "the President's continuing and apparently open-ended policy of 'gradualism' in the war" and said it amounted to a never-win policy.

"We simply must begin immediately to apply unrelenting military pressure on the enemy, bombing all targets of military significance, and closing the press support. I have grave misgivings about the war from confront and defeat Communist aggression in Vietnam and create a series of Asian buffer states around Red China," Tower said.

But Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., assistant majority leader, who described himself as "more of a hawk than the President," said he was standing behind Johnson.

"It seems to me that we are in this war and have no choice but to try and win it," he said. Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., who remains classed as a hawk, said "there is still no clear-cut policy which allows the military to use their forces most effectively and to strike at the enemy with a well-executed plan to defeat him, or force him to the peace table."

"I think it is bad policy for us to keep sending more and more men to war in South Vietnam while we fail to do all we can and should be doing in bombing North Vietnam."

Similarly, Sen. James O. Eastland, D-Miss., said: "We ought to do what is necessary to end the ability of North Vietnam to fight, destroy their food production, their military production."

Sens. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., John L. McClellan, D-Ark., and Paul J. Fannin, R-Ariz., said the President was not doing enough to win. McClellan and Sen. George A. Smathers, D-Fla., said the bombing of the north should have been expanded two years ago.

But Sen. Frank J. Lausche, D-Ohio, a presidential policy supporter, said he was disappointed there had been no recent bombing full to try to get negotiations started.

'Stalemate' Dirty Word To U.S. In Vietnam

SAIGON (AP) — American military and diplomatic leaders in South Vietnam deny the word "stalemate" and insist that many small and unspectacular developments show an unmistakable favorable trend in the war.

U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker expects the Sept. 3 election will be a substantial gain on the political front. The military commander, Gen. William C. Westmoreland, considers the fighting war is costing the enemy 15,000 casualties monthly and that this pressure in due course must have its effect. The Critics in Saigon who hold that a stalemate exists point to instances where no progress can be detected. They cite incompetent generals of South Vietnam, divisions, corrupt district chiefs, the threat of economic upheaval, continued American casualties, Communist attacks on rural pacification teams.

American officials, privately at least, frequently agree with such specific criticisms. But in the highest quarters the argument is advanced that the war is so complex that the statistics add up to the conclusion that the trend is improving.

NEWS PERSPECTIVE

bombing of North Vietnam is presented as an indispensable part of this pressure.

The soldiers, diplomats, economists and other experts in the U.S. mission admit that certain programs are behind schedule and certain areas uncertain. The cost of living has gone up about 30 per cent this year, for example. They insist, however, that the over-all picture is gradually improving.

"One factor frequently overlooked," said an American source concerned with top policy decisions, "is that we only had real pressure on the enemy for one year. The first year we were bringing in troops and building our bases and logistics from scratch."

"Now our pressure on the enemy is becoming evident. They (Hanoi) are beginning to recognize that they are pursuing an exercise in futility. They are facing a momentous decision about the course of the war. The enemy is not about to roll over and concede defeat but he is hurrying."

The trends cited by such sources are contained in statistics

Westmoreland's command South Vietnam is becoming more difficult, with more young boys and women appearing in these presented from official Red ranks.

— Communist prisoners and defectors report that while Red morale remains good it is beginning to fade, particularly among some North Vietnamese soldiers long in the South with little hope of returning home.

There are other fragments — like kill ratios and weapons ratios, the number of enemy-initiated incidents, or the amount of rice captured.

American officers say that while some statistics could be erroneous, the over-all conclusion must be that progress is being made.

Critics contest both the accuracy of some statistics and the relevance of part of them to be large measure they are the fact-political-guerrilla war. But the underpinning official American fact remains that the statistics can hope.

The Northeast Louisiana Mental Health Association will hold its regular monthly meeting at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the Louis Lock Room of Ouachita Parish Public Library on N. 18th St. and Stubbs Ave.

TWIN CINEMAS Theatre will look like this when the new facility is constructed in the Eastgate Shopping Center. Announcement of construction plans was made Saturday.

Plans Announced For Twin Cinemas Theatre

Joy Houck, New Orleans, president of Eastgate Cinema, Inc., and Jack Pope Saturday announced plans for Twin Cinemas Theatre in the Eastgate Shopping Center.

Construction of the new facility, first in the Mid-South and the only one in Louisiana outside of metropolitan New Orleans, will begin in the "near future."

The twin theatre will utilize the present Eastgate Cinema, which will be designated Eastgate No. 1. A matching theatre will be constructed on the north side of the present building. Architects for the expansion will be John and Neel of Monroe.

Cost of the new building was not listed, but the company officials pointed out that the latest equipment will be installed. This will include 70-millimeter projectors and stereo sound, giving it the most modern theatre facilities in the area.

Located at 201 Standley, the new theatre will be used primarily for road show engagements. Houck said contracts have already been signed for many of the principal "boxoffice bonanzas," including such motion pictures as "The Bible" and "The Sand Pebbles." Others will be contracted before the opening date, tentatively slated for December.

Eastgate Cinema 2 will have rocking chair seats, similar to the present theatre, with wall-to-wall carpeting and completely draped, Houck added.

The two theatres will utilize the same box office and concession stand, he said.

Houck said the new construction was planned because of the growth of the Monroe area, and the Eastgate Center in particular.

Youth Found Fatally Hanged

Ellender Not To Back Tax Increase

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Allen J. Ellender, D-La., served notice Saturday he will not support the administration proposal for a tax increase unless there is a cutback in spending.

"If the budget could be balanced through cuts in spending, an increase in taxes might be justified," he said. "However, it is my view that it would be unfair and unjust to impose additional taxes and keep on expanding non-essential programs."

Ellender said he was disappointed to see the tax increase proposal sent to Congress.

"In my estimation, it would be much better from the standpoint of fiscal responsibility, the nation's economy and the inflationary trend, if federal expenditures could be reduced enough to make this tax increase unnecessary," he said.

There has been considerable lip service concerning efforts to reduce federal spending, Ellender said, but almost without exception spokesmen of the executive branch who have appeared before the Senate Appropriations Committee—of which he is a member—have asked increased funds for new programs and for expanding old programs.

"Now, the question arises, should Congress increase taxes?" he said. "I say 'no' if the spending spree is continued."

found by the father, Robert F. Dickson. Police said the grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Dickson, told them they watched television with the boy before he went to his bedroom. WC518ped aug 19

Forecast Cheers Up Fairbanks

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP)—A revised weather forecast cheered residents of this sudden community of 30,000 Saturday as they shaped a crash program to pump out, dry out and winterize after flood damage estimated at up to $200 million.

The Weather Bureau predicted showers Saturday night followed by clearing and only a 10 per cent chance of rain Sunday. Earlier there was a 40 per cent chance of showers today.

Help came from around the country. With some fire fighting equipment here inoperative, the Air Force said it would fly two fire trucks here today from California.

Civic leaders formed a seven-man committee to plan and coordinate repairs from the week's flood that damaged homes and businesses and displaced thousands of residents.

"This will be a more persistent problem than the 1964 Alaska earthquake," said Joseph Fitzgerald, chairman of the Federal Field Committee for Development Planning in Alaska.

"They were waiting for spring. You are waiting for winter."

He meant that in perhaps six weeks it will be freezing in this central Alaska area where the temperature can drop to 60 below in midwinter.

Army Engineers have been directed to begin repair of roads, streets, the Alaska Railroad, utilities and schools as soon as flood water drains off.

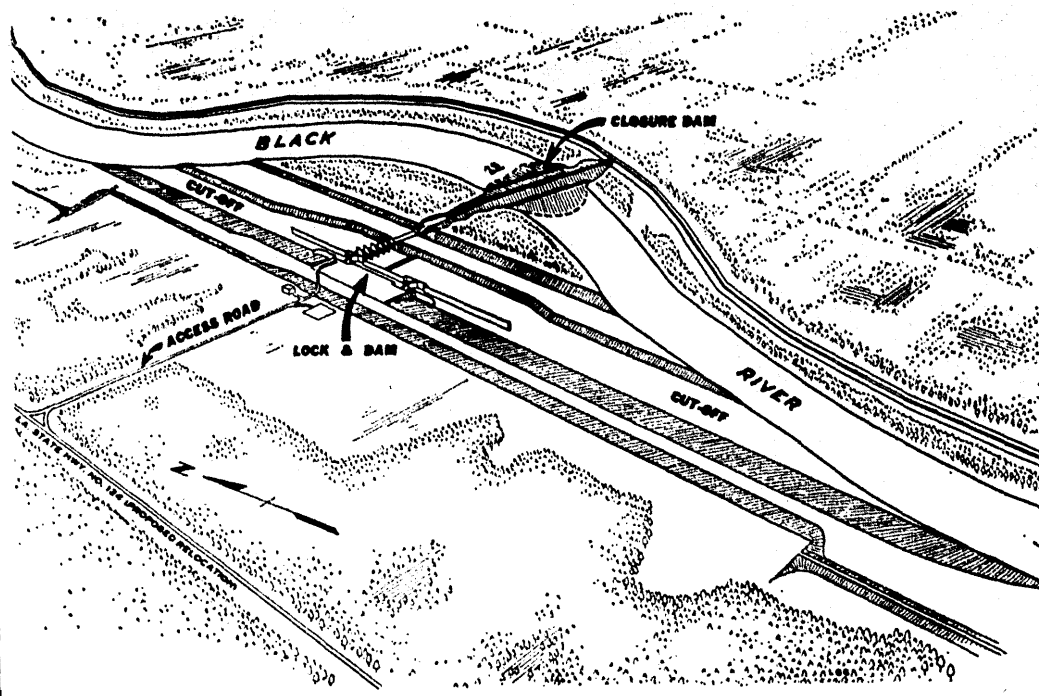

A staff of 40 is to be operating next week, taking and acting on applications for federal disaster. Homeowners straggling back to their silt-laden homes got advice from officials.

Wait until water levels are down before pumping out basements; otherwise hydrostatic pressure may collapse the walls.

Don't try to restart cars and trucks until the engines are flushed; sand in the water could ruin them.

With newspapers shut down and only one radio station on the air for several days, the University of Alaska put out a mimeographed sheet called High Water News.

Among other things, the News reported that a resident of the Pioneer Hall, home for oldtimers, was asked what he needed to be more comfortable in temporary quarters. His reply: "A fifth of scotch."

THIS DRAWING shows the proposed lock and dam site to be constructed on the Black River, seven miles south of Jonesville. Ground was broken Friday afternoon for the structure, which is expected to be completed by 1970. The facilities are part of the $80 million project for a nine-foot navigational channel on the Ouachita and Black rivers.

Gremillion Denies Deal Over Brown

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP)—Louisiana Atty. Gen. Jack P.F. Gremillion denied Saturday there was a deal between state and federal authorities to "keep Rap Brown under wraps."

Brown, who had been scheduled to speak in Baton Rouge at a civil rights rally Sunday, was arrested in New York on a federal charge of carrying firearms while under indictment. He was under indictment in Maryland on charges of arson, rioting and inciting to riot. Federal officers said he carried a 30-caliber carbine on flights between New York and New Orleans.

Murphy Bell, Baton Rouge Negro attorney, said it appeared that federal and state officers had co-operated in jailing Brown.

Gremillion said it was not true. He said state officers knew Brown was carrying a gun and that he bought ammunition in a Baton Rouge store.

IRAKLION, Crete (AP)—The 223-member World Council of Churches announced plans Saturday for formal discussions with Marxist leaders next spring on economic development and what it means to be human in a technological society.

"In a sense both Marxists and Christians have failed to meet the challenge of the modern age, and this makes us open to new ideas," declared the Rev. Paul Abrecht after announcing a five-day "consultation" to be held probably in Moscow.

Contract Noted By United Gas

HOUSTON (Special) — United Gas Corporation revealed here that it has entered into a contract with a major engineering firm to make engineering and pipeline design studies directed toward development of a multi-million dollar manufacturing and pipeline complex for producing high-purity hydrogen to serve refineries, chemical and other industrial plants in the Houston area of the Gulf Coast, according to R. U. Haslinger, executive vice president of United Gas and Pennzoil Company.

"For some time our company has been studying a major leadership education school, will feature classes and workshops, panel discussions and major addresses. Outstanding educators, international officers, interfraternity leaders and businessmen will comprise the Seminar faculty."

project involving the manufacture and pipeline delivery of hydrogen in this highly industrialized coastal area," Haslinger said.

Feasibility studies already made indicate that plant and pipeline facilities to meet near-term hydrogen requirements in the area should have a daily capacity of 100 million cubic feet. This would require the construction of dual plant units, each capable of producing a minimum of 50 million cubic feet of hydrogen per day, the United Gas official said.

Today's young college graduates have a need for achievement and this affects the way progressive business organizations operate, the assistant to the president of Olin Mathieson Chemical Corporation told summer graduates of Northeast Louisiana State College in commencement exercises Saturday.

Theodore (Ted) J. Olsen, who has been a corporate organization and planning manager for the past six years, delivered the main address for 207 graduates.

"When interviewing prospective employees," Olsen said, "I find that the main thing that motivates today's students is a desire for achievement. But it's more than just a desire; it's a personal need."

"It is characteristic of this achievement orientation that the young graduate sets goals for himself. Then he wants to be told how he is doing; he needs feedback. He insists on a high element of personal responsibility. He must understand the environment in which he works, and for this reason many organizations are changing."

Olsen described the evolution of corporations from entrepreneurship, where control was in the hands of a few, through the bureaucratic stage to the more recent dynamic organizations. The more dynamic organization assumes that the employee wants to work and to be responsible, he said. The essential job for management, then, is to arrange the environment and circumstances to permit people to do their best.

The reason for this trend, Olsen concluded, is that power has passed from the accumulators of capital and land to the accumulators of talent and knowledge.

GIRLS GALORE will be seen in the spectacular Holiday on Ice International production numbers when the "big show" comes to the Monroe Civic Center ARENA Sept. 13-17. The Glamour-Icers, Holiday's chorus, will present their colorful tribute to vaudeville with a dazzling number, "The Show Must Go On."

Life Of Holiday On Ice Chorus Girl Arduous

There are stars galore with more, in fact, than with any the 22nd edition of Holiday on other ice extravaganza. But, the "Glamour - Icers," that group of skating beauties who from the girls' chorus line, are as important to the success of the world famed ice spectacular as the stars.

The "Glamour - Icers" are picked from the world's outstanding free - style skaters. Scouts are continually on the lookout for candidates for the Holiday skating team, and auditions are held frequently in the many countries where Holiday appears.

This year, 23 of the members of the Holiday cast lived and learned to skate south of the Mason Dixon line.

After a skater is selected, there is a training period of almost three months before the skater becomes part of the ensemble, and then she is worked in gradually. Like a baseball, football or hockey team, there are reserves.

Skating isn't the only requisite for a "Glamour - Icer." She has to fit the figure pattern set for the line. There is a weight chart to follow, partially because she has to stay in top physical condition and, also, because she has to fit into her costumes. Five pound difference can mean trouble. On top of everything else, each girl becomes a make - up expert, doing her own make - up and hair and keeping her wardrobe of wigs in shape.

Being a chorus girl with Holiday on Ice is an arduous life, but it has its compensations. The troop tours over 30,000 miles a year and hears the applause of nearly two million people, and the "Glamour - Icers" take great pride in their chosen field of entertainment.

Holiday on Ice International will open a seven performance engagement at the Monroe Civic Center ARENA on Wednesday, Sept. 13, with four evening shows at 8:15 on Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Sat-

LEE ROY MIXON

Grayson Man Candidate For Sheriff

COLUMBIA (Special) — Lee Roy Mixon, Grayson oil and gas distributor, has announced his candidacy for the office of sheriff of Caldwell Parish in the Nov. 4 Democratic primary.

A resident of Grayson since 1938, Mixon is a native of Bienville Parish. He is a graduate of Jonesboro-Hodge High School and attended business college in Monroe.

Mixon has been in business in Caldwell Parish for the past 29 years, except for a 26-month tour of duty in the U.S. Army during World War II. He served overseas for 16 months of that time.

Born in 1917, Mixon is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Mixon of Grayson. The candidate's father served as city marshal of Grayson for many years.

Active in civic affairs and Caldwell Parish youth programs, Mixon is a past president of the Grayson Lions Club.

He is a past commander and past adjutant of Caldwell Post 162 of the American Legion, and he holds membership in the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the 40 and 8 Society of the American Legion.

Mixon is a Master Mason of Clarks Lodge No. 382 and a member of the Royal Arch Masons of Clarks Lodge No. 78. He is a recipient of the Super Excellent Master Degree of the Grand Council of Royal and Select Master Masons of Louisiana.

A member of the Monroe Commandery No. 7, Mixon is a 32nd Degree Mason of the Shreveport Consistory and a member of the El Karubah Shrine Temple of Shreveport.

Mixon, who attend the Grayson Baptist Church, has been a Special Agent for the Louisiana State Police for the past six years.

Mixon helped organize the first Little League baseball program in Caldwell parish. He managed the American Legion baseball team in Caldwell for five years.

A member of the Caldwell Parish Athletic Club, Lee Roy for many years has sponsored independent basketball and softball teams in the area.

In announcing his candidacy for the sheriff's post, Mixon issued the following statement: "After much thought and consideration and a great deal of encouragement from many friends, I have decided to seek the office of sheriff of Caldwell Parish.

"It is my belief that my years of business experience, community service and civic activity have helped qualify me for this important public responsibility.

"During the coming weeks, I will conduct a campaign founded on honesty, sincerity and integrity, the same as my tenure of office will be if the people of Caldwell Parish choose to elect me as their sheriff.

"I do not intend to insult the intelligence of the voters of this parish with a campaign based on emotional appeals, half-truths and unkept promises.

"In order to maintain independence throughout the campaign and throughout my years in office if I am elected, I will make no political promises to anyone nor will I become obligated to any person or faction of people.

"If elected, I will conduct the duties of the sheriff's office in a dignified and businesslike manner and will build the kind of law enforcement agency that the people of the parish will be able to look to with pride.

"Though the election is drawing near, I will attempt in the weeks ahead to contact personally every voter in this parish and to solicit the support and aid of all of the people of Caldwell.

"My roots in Caldwell Parish are deep. Most of my life has been spent here. My parents live here. My children were born, reared and educated here. Caldwell Parish is my parish and its people are my people. This parish and its people have been good to me, and it is for this reason that I seek an opportunity to serve them in public office."

New Orleans Hosts Signing Of Vet Bill

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — President Lyndon B. Johnson has declined an invitation to come to New Orleans for a ceremonial signing of a $285.6 million benefit bill for veterans.

George Christian, presidential press secretary, told newsmen Saturday that the President would not make the trip.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars, holding their 68th annual convention here, had hoped the President would come here to sign the measure, passed by the House Friday.

Another Johnson, though, Gen. Harold K. Johnson, chief of staff of the U.S. Army, is slated to be the keynote speaker Monday. Johnson will speak after welcoming speeches by Louisiana Gov. John J. McKeithen and New Orleans Mayor Victor Schiro.

Registration for the week-long convention has been under way two days. At the last count, Saturday forenoon, 9,832 persons had registered. Some 35,000 visitors are expected, the largest convention in the history of New Orleans.

DONNA GULLETTE
manager, and DOTTIE DABADIE who has been out of town, would like to invite all of her friends and customers to come in and see them.

Husband Admits To Shooting Self, Wife, Setting Fire To Home

ST. CLOUD, Minn. (AP) — A small-town Sunday school superintendent has admitted shooting himself and inventing a story in which he blamed mid-night marauders for the deaths of his wife and four small children in their burning home.

Sheriff Peter Lahr said Saturday that David Hoskins, 30, had signed a statement saying he had shot his wife, then set fire to their farmhouse to conceal the crime. No charges were immediately filed.

The charred bodies of his wife, Loreta, 29, and their children—Julie, 6, Darla, 5, Linda, 1½, and David, 6 weeks—were recovered Friday from the smoldering ruins.

The Hoskins farm home is about 60 miles north of Minneapolis in Central Minnesota.

"Hoskins states that after wounding himself with the death weapon and setting the fires, he also tied himself to his outdoor clothesline pole and only then realized that his children were in the burning house," the Stearns County sheriff said.

"He further claims that he attempted to free himself to save the children but became entangled and was unable to free himself," the sheriff said at a news conference.

Hoskins, chairman of the board of the Church of Christ at nearby Kimball, Minn., where he had been Sunday school superintendent for three years, was found tied to a clothesline pole by a group of teen-agers. Some youngsters noticed the house and barn afire and stopped to investigate.

Hoskins was naked to the waist and bleeding from gunshot wounds in the shoulder and abdomen. He was taken to St. Cloud hospital, and a bullet was removed from his shoulder.

At the hospital, Hoskins told the sheriff he was watching television with his wife when he heard a car door slam about midnight Thursday.

Hoskins said he went outside to investigate, was jumped by four or five young men who shot him during a scuffle and then tied him, arms spread outward, on a clothesline pipe near the house. The sheriff said Hoskins changed his story during interrogation at the hospital Friday night. Hoskins was not under formal arrest, but a guard was at the door to his hospital room. Hoskins, a helicopter pilot in the National Guard, was taken off the danger list Saturday and was reported in serious condition. The man's "wounds were self-inflicted to deter further investigation and not a serious suicide attempt," Sheriff Lahr said.

Paul Doener, Stearns County attorney, said no formal complaint had been prepared but added one would be filed Monday. "We think the motive has been established, but it cannot be revealed until further corroborating evidence is obtained," Doener said. The couple were married in February, 1958. "They were so wound around each other that it was a joy to see," said a relative. Mrs. Clinton Webb, Cokato, Minn., a sister-in-law of Mrs. Hoskins, said the Hoskins "were well-liked folks. No one I know can speak against them." Another sister-in-law Mrs. Richard Webb, said, "They were a real happy couple. They just idolized their children. They thought the world of each other and their children."

John Y. Bell Announces For Assessor

WINNFIELD (Special) — John Y. Bell, in announcing his candidacy for re-election as Tax Assessor of Winn Parish, makes the following statement:

"I want to express my sincere appreciation for your past confidence in my work as your Tax Assessor. I have tried to serve you to the best of my ability. I have made every effort to keep taxes at the lowest possible rate and still have enough money for the various taxing bodies of the Parish to adequately operate their departments.

"I am against the 'so called' equalization program, as this program is but another method to kill the Homestead Exemption and raise taxes.

"I have seen to it that your Homestead Exemption Applications were properly signed and that this benefit is made available to everyone entitled to it.

"If you will re-elect me your Tax Assessor, I promise to maintain assessments in a fair and equitable manner and to continue to aid and assist everyone in any matters over which I have any control. You are always welcome to visit your Assessor's Office and to get the prompt, courteous service to which you are entitled.

"I sincerely solicit your vote and support in my campaign for re-election."

Sheriff Holds Man In Killing

GREENVILLE, Miss. (AP) — The Washington County sheriff's office Saturday charged Walter Morris, about 45, with murder, kidnap and assault and battery with intent to kill in the fatal shooting of a Greenville man and the wounding of the man's wife.

Deputy sheriff Robert Suddeth said Morris, who also gave the name Morgan, was first identified as James Willie Cochran, but this later proved incorrect.

Suddeth said Morris was arrested near Arcola when deputy A. L. Matthews stopped an auto and found Morris armed with a pistol. The kidnap charge was filed when the driver of the car, not identified by officers, said Morris held him at gunpoint after entering his car.

Morris is charged with killing W. M. Smith and wounding his wife Minnie, both 45. She was reported in satisfactory condition.

Officers said the Smiths were in their car on the Mississippi River levee near downtown Greenville when they were shot.

Away From Home

Richard Enwright

Da Vinci

Below were golden mountains on the island which rose from the sea. Tiny houses clustered in villages or hovered near the water's edge. The sea seemed intent to batter down the island, and from the airplane it was as though some irresistible force were attempting to destroy an immovable object. You wondered about the island's future for the record of seas through time has been one of victory. In the haze on the horizon appeared the coast of Tuscany. The airplane flew on and Elba slowly was lost. It was impossible to imagine Napoleon ever having been dissatisfied.

Leonardo da Vinci aerodrome was not altogether unlike many international airports of the jet age. Black tiled concourses extended into the distance on each side of the great terminal building. Jets, which bore the flags of many nations parked, surrounded by service equipment, near the concourse. There were yellow, white, and blue Boeings of Lufthansa, Caravels of Air France, C. ets of British Overseas Airways, and a familiar white and blue Douglas of Pan American. Nearby another Douglas, white with the green markings of Alitalia, rested next to a big glass-nosed, four-engine turbo-prop, the rudder of which was emblazoned with the red hammer and sickle and "CCCP" of Aeroflot, the Russian airline.

Now an international arrivals terminal is an exciting place even to the most blasé tourist. Where else could you find such a babble of languages, peoples of other lands, and those other familiar features of international travel, mile-weary flight bags which bulged with cameras and whiskey and bore the names of airlines from countries which used to be stories in geography books.

At Leonardo da Vinci you saw those things and heard the usual European "gong-gong-gong" which always proceeded a completely sophisticated, almost seductive, girl's voice foretelling the imminent departure of airplanes to Karachi, Bali or Singapore.

At Leonardo da Vinci, however, there had been a discernible difference. In the first place, who but Italians had ever heard of naming an airport after one of the world's greatest artists? Most airports are named for cities, political figures, or in the manner of Russians, for ancient heroes, good or bad. Interestingly, airlines have reduced these names, even da Vinci's, to the most common simple denominator. Because his beautiful new aerodrome lived at Fiumicino, da Vinci, man of art, of letters, and of the world; builder of the Italian Renaissance, would have seen it become merely "FCO."

If the airlines had abbreviated da Vinci's new jet terminal to "FCO," history, Italy, and especially Rome had not. Leonardo da Vinci, new jetport, lived near Ostia, the ancient Roman port. Where tourists hurried along busy concourses, Roman legions once trod. Who could

Parish Holds Metairie Man As Fugitive

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Henry J. Neidhardt Jr., 31, of Metairie, a fugitive from Mississippi, was held in a Jefferson Parish jail Saturday.

Officers said Neidhardt offered no resistance to arrest Friday night when he was spotted at a car which allegedly had been stolen in New Orleans.

The arrest came after suburban residents reported they were suspicious about a car parked in their area. Deputies waited for the driver, and arrested Neidhardt when he appeared.

Neidhardt escaped from the Jackson County jail at Pascagoula, Miss., early this month. Officers there said he had "outside help" in rigging up a torch to burn his way out of jail. He climbed down the four-story building by the hose used for the torch.

He had been held here on a charge of possession of postal money orders stolen in Louisiana.

Jefferson Parish authorities said they were holding Neidhardt, pending his return to Mississippi by the FBI.

This hearing invention is the result of 33 years of experience by Otation's President utilizing the development by Bell Telephone Laboratories of the miracle transistors similar to those used in U. S. satellites. Now... you can live, work and play without embarrassment... because:

1. Instead of forcing amplified sound through the impaired eardrum or middle ear, the patented "Tympano Technique" conducts sound smoothly through the mastoid process directly to the "hearing center," the inner ear!
2. It provides superior, extended range, full circle hearing at ear level, where hearing belongs!

Gas Group To Meet At Shreveport

SHREVEPORT (Special) — The American Gas Association's Committee on Underground Storage, which has 75 members representing the United States and Canada, will meet here Wednesday through Friday with a tour of the $31 million Bistineau Gas Storage Project of United Gas Pipe Line Co. near Ringgold as a featured attraction.

John A. Vary, chief reservoir engineer of Michigan Consolidated Gas Co., Detroit, Mich., and chairman of the AGA Committee on Underground Storage, will preside at the three-day meeting.

The opening sessions on Wednesday will include reports on various research projects, meetings of task groups, discussions, and other phases of business as the Captain Shreve Hotel.

The agenda on Thursday will include a tour of the gas storage facilities of United Gas Pipe Line Co., beginning at 7:30 a.m. when the group will board chartered buses at the hotel.

R. Dale Wroten, senior production engineer of United Gas Pipe Line Co. and immediate past chairman of the AGA storage committee, is in charge of arrangements for the meeting and the tour of the gas storage project.

United Gas also will be host for the group's luncheon meeting at the Hodges Garden Motel, a tour of Hodges Gardens, and a dinner meeting at the Shreveport Country Club on Thursday. Wives of committee members and other guests will make the tours and attend the luncheon and dinner meetings.

United's Bistineau Gas Storage Project is one of the largest in the nation. Located about four miles northwest of Ringgold on the east side of Lake Bistineau, the project turned an essentially-depleted Pettet zone of the Sligo Formation into a spacious underground "storage warehouse" for natural gas.

The total area involved, including a buffer zone around the reservoir's periphery, occupies about 20 square miles in Bienville and Bossier parishes, of which the Pettet zone covers some 4,900 acres.

Nearly 50 billion cubic feet of gas have been injected into the Bistineau storage reservoir since injections were begun on Sept. 1, 1966. The storage project facilities include a 12,000 horsepower compressor station, a dehydration plant with a 500 million cubic feet daily capacity, 32 injection - withdrawal wells, nine observation wells, and more than 20 miles of gathering and transmission pipelines.

United's three-phase Bistineau Gas Storage Project (1966 - 67, 1968 and 1969) is equivalent to a new industry for the Northwest Louisiana area, involving new payrolls, royalties, purchases, a five-fold increase in state and parish ad valorem tax revenues, and other economy-boosting aspects.

The purpose of gas storage projects is to provide gas companies a means of storing up customers in low and holding it ready for the time when demand is high.

At the end of 1966, the nation had 303 gas storage pools located in 25 states. During the year, there were one trillion cubic feet of gas withdrawn from storage by 78 companies, with 12,861 wells and 780,095 compressor horsepower involved.

The committee, with more than 50 of its members expected to be in attendance, will reconvene at the Captain Shreve Hotel at 9 a.m. Friday, August 25, for Task Group Committees' reports, general business sessions, and adjournment at noon.

Burton Rites Will Be Held On Monday

Funeral services for Eleazer Burton, 90, of Monroe, will be held at 9:30 a.m. Monday in the chapel of Hixson Brothers Funeral Home here with the Rev. Joe Monge of Central Baptist Church officiating.

Burial will be in the Hasley Cemetery in West Monroe.

Mr. Burton died Saturday afternoon in a local nursing home after a long illness.

He is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Paul Sullivan of Many and Mrs. Sonoma Martin of West Monroe; five grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Man Knifed; Treated At Hospital Here

Monroe police Saturday arrested a 21-year-old woman on charges of aggravated battery in connection with the knifing of a 37-year-old man.

Peggy Neil Hightower, 100 DeSiard Ave., was arrested on the charges after Johnnie May, of 726 Adams St. was treated and released from E. A. Conway Memorial Hospital here with knife wounds in the chest, right arm, right leg, and shoulder.

In other action officers reported the burglary of Bivin's "Quickie" grocery store, 908 N. 18th St.

Officers said the thieves entered through an air conditioner vent on the roof of the building and made off with $30 in small change left in the cash register.

In West Monroe, police arrested Scott Certain, 17, of 409 Arlington Pl. on a charge of theft and Tommy Younse Jr., 19, of 307 Arlington Pl. on a charge of receiving stolen property.

Officers said the youths were arrested in connection with an incident which is still under investigation.

Charles W. Howell, 30, of 106 Peach St., West Monroe, was arrested with officers and charged with driving while intoxicated and reckless driving.

A simple battery charge was placed against James D. Huntley, 24, of 506 Gulpha Dr., West Monroe.

Hightower Candidate For House

Lemmie O. Hightower, Bastrop attorney, has qualified as a candidate for the Louisiana House of Representatives. He will campaign for election to one of the two posts to be filled from the 44th District which is composed of Union and Morehouse parishes.

Hightower, who graduated at Northeast Louisiana State College, and earned his law degree at Tulane University, resides with his wife and one son on the Crossett Road at Bastrop.

While attending Northeast State in Monroe, Hightower held a part-time job and was elected student body president. He later worked his way through law school.

After receiving his law degree, Hightower served with the U.S. Army. He later moved to Bastrop where he opened his own law office and since that time has engaged in the general practice of law.

Hightower is a Presbyterian, a former director with the Bastrop Jaycees, and a member of the American Legion. He is presently serving on the board of directors of the Northeast Louisiana Division of the Arthritis Foundation, and as leadership chairman for the Northern District of the Boy Scouts of America. He is a member of the Public Affairs Research Council of Louisiana, and a number of other civic, social and professional groups.

In announcing his entry into the political arena, Hightower said that his decision to seek election to the House of Representatives was "motivated by a sincere desire to effectively represent the fine people of our two parishes in Baton Rouge and to see our area move ahead. I feel that my background and training qualifies me to fill the post I seek capably, honestly and humbly."

"My law practice has brought me into contact with citizens from both parishes and from all walks of life. I am familiar with their problems and their desires. When elected, I intend to equally represent the interests of the citizens of both parishes," Hightower stated.

The 31-year-old lawyer continued, "In order to keep in close contact with the people of our district, I expect to maintain an office in both parishes and to make myself available at such offices on a regular weekly basis in Farmerville, as well as Bastrop, to discuss the needs and problems of our citizens."

"I will campaign for election in the same manner as I expect to serve—with determination and hard work," Hightower declared. "And, I intend to present my own merits and ability and refrain from personal attacks on my opponents."

He promised a "very active campaign."

"Almost all of our citizens are deeply concerned about our current insurance rate status. We must closely examine this area of our law. Our insurance problems must be discovered and corrected," Hightower stated.

"It is my firm belief," Hightower continued, "that we live in an area that is on the threshold of almost unbelievable economic growth and development, however it is essential that we have the type of leadership that can assure the development of this potential to its maximum. Without such leadership, progress can and will pass us by."

Hightower continued with his statement: "Being a father, I am vitally concerned with the quality of our educational system. We must prepare our children through capable instruction to meet the needs of tomorrow. We must retain our qualified teachers.

"Fair and equitable welfare benefits must be provided without abuse and waste."

"Not only are we in an area that offers great opportunity for new industrial development, but we are blessed with a tremendous bounty of natural recreational and outdoor resources. These offer great benefits for those of us fortunate to live in this area, plus they serve as a tremendous vehicle for tourist attraction. We must preserve and further develop our fishing waters and game areas."

"We must continue to improve and expand our system of roads and highways."

"All of our citizens must work together to improve our two parishes. We must also all work with our law enforcement officials to maintain good order in our communities."

"If honored by election, I will work hard to be an outstanding legislator and all of my decisions will be based on what I believe

Baton Rouge Jails Negro Of Jonesboro

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Ernest Thomas, 33, who claimed to be a "security guard" for militant Black Power leader Stokely Carmichael, was returned to jail here Saturday.

A sheriff's airplane brought Thomas from his Jonesboro home, and he was held on a bench warrant, usually issued when a defendant fails to appear in court on an appointed date.

Thomas had been free on bail on a charge of carrying a concealed weapon. He and two others were arrested May 18 after sheriff's deputies stopped their car.

Thomas, Spiver W. Gordon, people I serve. "I do not represent any special groups, interests, or cliques. I have entered this race for representative as an independent and I am committed to only one faction - you the people of our two parishes."

"In this campaign," Hightower said, "I will not align myself with any other candidate, but after the election I will work in harmony with the other representatives. Two representatives will be elected. I expect to be one of them. I am in this race to win and to effectively represent the people of our two parishes."

In closing his announcement, Hightower stated, "I am calling on all citizens who want to see our area effectively and honorably represented to join with men in this campaign. We need your prayers, in order to achieve the progress which our district deserves."

27, Plaquemine, and Cleveland, was here at the time to address a student assembly at a copy of the Peking edition of "Quotations of Chairman Mao" guards for Carmichael, who Deputies said each carried a "Tse-Tung."

Scientists Develop Important Aids In Law Enforcement

Not all of the scientists are working on moon rockets. A lot of them are trying to help the police, with such wonders as heat cameras, sleep guns, nerve gas in spray cans, fingerprint scanners, and national computer networks. Here's the latest thinking in the constant war on crime.

By BERNARD GAVZER
AP Newsfeatures Writer

With the help of the scientist, American law enforcement is shedding its 19th Century methods to catch up with the 20th Century criminal.

Modern mobility being what it is, and the modern crook being what he is, it has been within the realm of possibility for a California bank robber to take a jet to New York, steal a car in New Jersey, rob a bank in Pennsylvania and be back in California the same day.

But now, the combined wizardry of computer and communications is bringing law enforcement closer to the day that a cop will be waiting at the airport when the robber gets back.

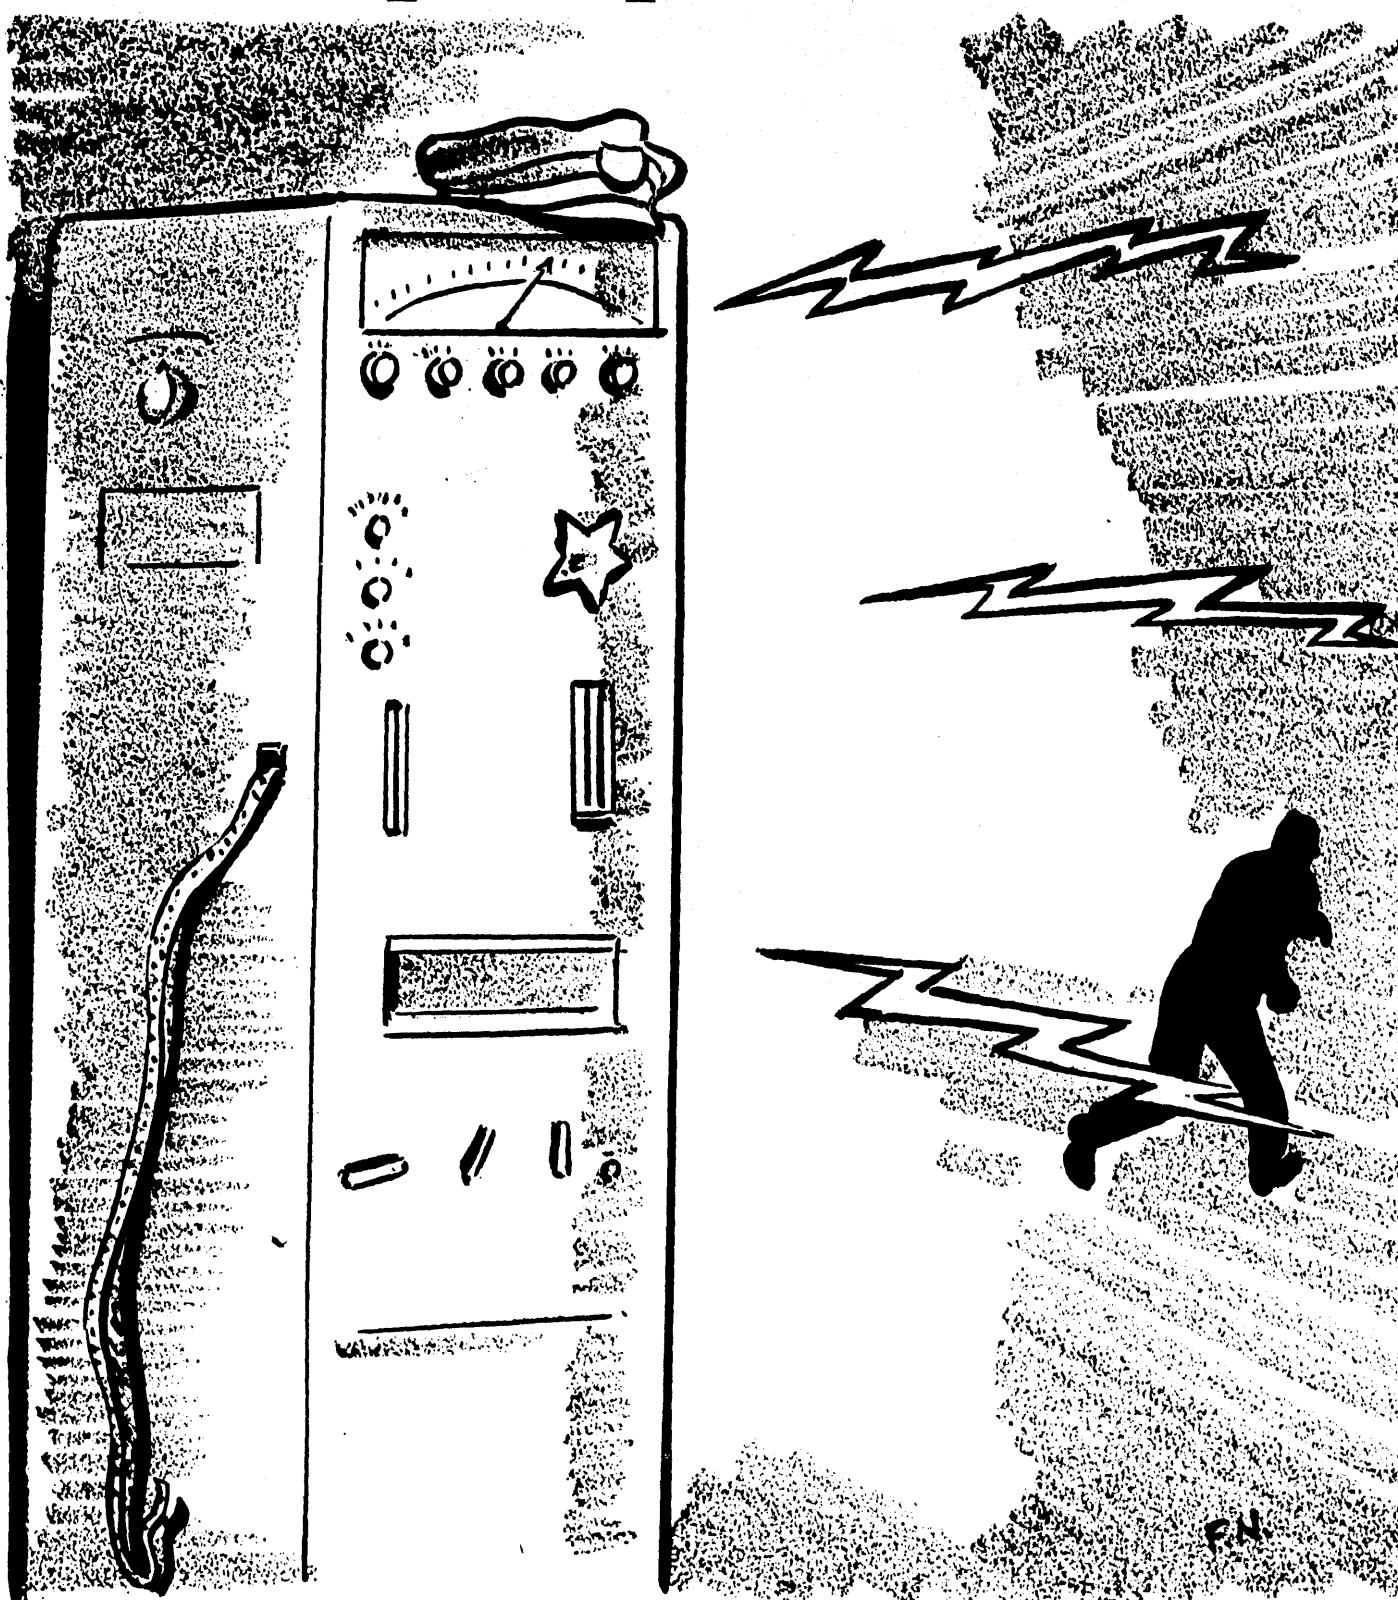

The tools and techniques that promise revolutionary change in the ancient battle against crime have come from the research laboratories and think tanks where scientists, in their ivory tower tradition, have hardly thought of police except when receiving parking tickets.

INVENT SOLUTIONS

"It might be said that we invent solutions and then go in search of problems they can solve," says a researcher at Perkin-Elmer, a sort of science factory in Connecticut. It has defense contracts and does research aimed at industry, but some of its instruments have direct value in crime laboratories. One is an atomic absorption device which can find evidence of one millionth of a gram of LSD in an entire cube of sugar.

The arsenal of new weapons and gadgets can put down a lone burglar in Kalamazoo or a mob in Newark. There is a dart injector gun that can tranquilize a violent person in seconds; a liquid gas spray called Mace that reaches beneath the skin to the nerves and instantly stuns a person; a noisemaker called a "curdler" which makes a person stop whatever he's doing to hold his ears; an anti-burglar device that electronically profiles an intruder and spells out his height, weight and what he's wearing; a detector that spies on other detectors; a foam that makes a person feel he is suffocating; a chemical that makes him slippery.

One example of how a tool for industry eventually becomes a tool of law enforcement is the Frisker, a device that detects metal. The logging industry needed such a detector because of the danger of cutting blades taking a bite into metal hidden in trees. It followed that if it could find metal in trees it could do the same on a human. Walk-through detectors were installed in prisons and other high security installations. Now there is a hand-held one which a policeman can use to find a concealed gun, knife or metal object on a person being searched.

COMPUTERS ARE AMONG the many aids which scientists have added to the lineup of equipment used to advance crime detection and law enforcement operations in the nation.

"There have been applications across the law enforcement spectrum," says Dr. Alfred Blumstein of the Institute of Defense Analysis in Washington. Dr. Blumstein served as director of the Science and Technology Task Force on the President's Commission on Law Enforcement and Criminal Justice. It made a comprehensive study of what there was and what was needed and how it could be used.

"You will find the new technology at work in alarms and detectors, in weapons, in the crime laboratories, in communications and especially in the storage and retrieval of information," he says.

The attack on crime can be focused on prevention at one end, punishment and rehabilitation at the other.

One stumbling block in this process is that the criminal also keeps pace with new developments. He was using the automobile to flee a crime scene before the police had enough department vehicles, for example, to set up road blocks and long before the foot patrolman got on wheels. Burglars were using walkie-talkies long before they were issued by police departments. Relatively few departments today have them for each officer on patrol duty. When wiretaps and electronic bugs were used to secretly gather information about criminal activity, the criminals obtained detectors. But the one thing that most criminals, smart or stupid, have is mobility. And that is where law enforcement is hoping to catch the crook, by making the automobile a trap instead of a trip. And to make any trip a possible trap.

The way to do this, of course, is to be able to keep track of criminals and to have a foolproof memory that never makes a mistake.

Is there a brain which could do this job? Yes, it is the computer, the machine which worked marvels for the nation's space programs, its defense structure, its commerce, its industries.

One of the pioneers in computer use in law enforcement is Alameda County in California. The Police Information Network — PIN — is the brain for 93 separate law enforcement agencies in the nine San Francisco — Oakland bay area counties.

There are banks upon banks of computers in the county data processing center. They do many bread and butter jobs, ranging from country payrolls to preparation of court calendars, but the police interest is in PIN. It has more than 200,000 warrants for arrest registered in its brain. How does this help the cop on the street?

Witness Officer William Hansen, Badge No. 666, on a typical tour of his beat.

MANY BURGLARS

"A lot of burglars live here," says Hansen, "but that doesn't mean they work here." driving his patrol car, he makes a random tour. "I don't like to go the same way every day or hour, otherwise some wise guy could figure out a pattern for the beat."

He drove behind a car and said he'd show how fast he could get a check on it. Picking up his radio microphone, police would have a wireless one which would leave their hands free, he identified himself to the dispatcher and said, "Rolling check on..." and gave the license plate number of the car and also asked for a double query.

At the communication center, a coded inquiry, keyed with the letters DQ, was made and it automatically conducted a double search: of the center's PIN file and of AUTOSTATIS, which stands for Automatic Statewide Auto Theft Inquiry System, maintained by the California Highway Patrol in Sacramento. PIN has the information on outstanding warrants; AUTOSTATIS has information on stolen cars, plates and parts as well as cars associated with major crimes for the entire state of California.

FAST RETURN

Hansen had asked for the check at 7:03 p.m. He received a "clear" from PIN and AUTOSTATIS in one minute. The computers actually did their searches in about three seconds each; the rest of the time was taken in communication.

A good example of how this helps in a dangerous situation occurred not too long ago when a highway patrolman was pursuing a car that was going 10 miles over the speed limit," Hansen said. "He saw only one man in the car. When he asked for a rolling check, he was informed that it had apparently been used by three men in a robbery. Had he stopped that car alone, he might have shot down. But with the identification of the car in connection with a robbery, other patrols were brought in and they captured three armed men."

The stateline is not the end of the information line. National networks are being constructed or are in existence. In Phoenix, Ariz., Highway Patrol Maj. Jack Monschein oversees LETS, which is the Law Enforcement Teletype Service, a nationwide network that transmits information about wanted persons, stolen property, missing persons and other police matters. Some 4,500 police agencies are in LETS.

Those tied into the system can communicate selectively with one another, or with all the agencies. Messages that used to take hours or days to deliver to other police agencies, now get where they are going in minutes.

While LETS is an automatic system, it is overshadowed by NCIC, the FBI's growing National Crime Information Center in Washington. This is a computer operation, containing information on persons who have violated federal statutes or against whom there is a felony warrant outstanding — one on which the issuing state will take extradition action.

NCIC now has 7 state systems tied into it as well as tie-ups with metropolitan networks in Chicago, New York, St. Louis, New Orleans and Boston.

HIT RECORDED

One day recently a special policeman at Kennedy Airport took a man into custody and requested a check of NCIC in Washington. The suspect's name and date of birth were fed into the system and in three seconds the machine recorded a hit: the man was wanted in California for unlawful flight to avoid prosecution.

From the standpoint of the citizen who witnessed a crime or is in danger of being a victim, the computer — communications capability is full of promise.

The job: get a cop to the scene and stop the crime and catch the offender. Chicago is the locale of one of the finest immediate-response systems now operating in the nation.

Here is what happens. A resident of the Near North Side, for instance, thinks someone is trying to break into his apartment. He calls PO 5-1313 it's a free call and the call automatically goes to a dispatcher keyed to the specific neighborhood. In the past, it would go to a switchboard operator who would then direct it to a dispatcher.

The dispatcher learns the nature of the crime and the location and depresses a footpedal which gives him radio communication with the patrol cars assigned to his area. A console provides him with a picture of what vehicles are on patrol and available. He directs the closest one to the scene, and because he is trained to be highly familiar with the area under his control, he can tell the police whether they can make a surprise entry by going over a neighboring fence, take a short cut through a passageway or whether there are three possible exits for a fleeing suspect.

MAJOR SIGNIFICANCE

But the larger significance of the computer, according to police scientists, is in its use for manpower allocation. In many large departments, a chore such as charting beat patrols used to take months.

St. Louis, using computers, can do this for every watch. The computer gives it a running account of crime patterns; a rundown on personnel on vacation, sick or scheduled for court appearances; and weighs other factors, such as how many men may be occupied on a night during which there is a baseball game, an anti-Vietnam rally, a sit-in at City Hall and a convention of folks apt to do a bit of hell-raising.

The problem in all law enforcement is in preventing a crime, detecting it if it occurs, getting evidence to identify the person responsible, obtaining the evidence to get a conviction.

One of the most exciting tools recently developed to help corroborate a person's guilt or innocence is the Voiceprint. Devised by Lawrence C. Kersta of Somerville, N. J., the Voiceprint represents sound on a bar spectrogram and a contour spectrogram, which is similar to having a profile and a map of something. He also devised a classification system. His Voiceprint is based on the premise that no two adults voices are approximately 65 phonemes, which are precisely and exactly alike.

"The human mechanism can make approximately 44 phonemes," he says. "In the English language we use approximately 44 phonemes. The way each of us makes these phonemes is unique because of the uniqueness of each person's vocal cavities and articulators and the way in which they learned to speak."

Attempts to deceive the Voiceprint, says Kersta, have been made "by people who put marbles in their mouths or tried other tricks. The ear can be deceived, but not the machine."

Kersta's findings through Voiceprint have been admitted in various court cases. Says Kersta:

"I can see the possibility in the future in which a police officer making an arrest would have direct communications linkup to a Voiceprint installation. The offender's voice could be instantly classified and fed into a computer which would search a file of identified voices. In a matter of seconds or minutes, that officer could know the true identity of that person and whether he was wanted for anything."

Another astonishing development is the so-called heat camera. This was developed by the military and is based on the fact that all objects above absolute zero give off heat in the form of invisible infrared radiation. It is possible to use a thermograph to convert the heat through a scanner into a visible light beam and produce a visual picture. In demonstrating how this might be done, a mock murder was staged in which the body was then spirited away. The heat camera was later able to show where the body had been.

The most glamorous tools and instruments are to be found in the crime lab and among alarms and detectors. In the crime lab, there are instruments which measure ultraviolet absorption or emission and which can be used in astonishing ways.

PAINT TRACED

"If we find so much as a speck of paint on an accident victim," says a researcher at Perkin-Elmer in Connecticut, "We can trace the paint to the particular model of car and the car itself." Many of these processes are at work in forensic medicine, particularly when medical examiners try to unravel the cause of death in mysterious cases.

Neutron activation analysis, which measures the atomic half-life of elements, has been used by the Federal Bureau of Narcotics in getting evidence on the narcotics traffic. Says George Gaffney, deputy to director Henry Goddard:

"It is possible to take a sample of heroin and trace it right back to the soil in which it was grown as a poppy. Presumably, we could show the path of heroin from the grower to the dealer to the trafficker to the clandestine laboratory in which it was processed."

Ireland Tonic For Burl Ives

For Burl Ives, home is a five-acre estate on the River Shannon near Limerick. He's lost 70 pounds, sworn off drinking, and taken to snuff, but he hasn't sworn off America. He's due back on Broadway next month, and after that it's back to Ireland.

By EDDY GILMORE
Associated Press Writer

BALLYSTEEN, Ireland (AP) — Most foreigners who come to Ireland enjoy its superb food and get fat. With Burl Ives it's the other way around.

"I've lost 70 pounds over here," said Ives, "and my health's never been better. I may knock off another 25 or 30 and see if I can hold the line."

How much does he weigh?

"I never tell my weight," he replied, "but boy, if you knew it, you'd be surprised."

Burl Ives is a big, big man. As a freshman in high school in southern Illinois he weighed 206 pounds and played guard on the football team. He played the same position at Eastern Illinois College.

"In the two years I played at Eastern Illinois," recalled Ives, "I've never lost a game — and I never lost a pound." "I can't drink and lose weight," he said. "Every time I take a drink I get a ravenous appetite. So, I've knocked that off too for a while."

Instead, he smokes his pipe and sniffs snuff. Snuff sure enough?

"Sure enough snuff," he answered, "Come on, have some. Here's a whole tin of it for you."

Ballysteen is a tiny village within sight of the River Shannon, not too far from Limerick and Shannon Airport.

IMMEDIATE LIKING

Ives came to Ireland first 14 years ago to sing in a concert to raise funds for a hospital in Dublin.

"I liked Ireland immediately," he explained, "but when I saw the west of Ireland it was a love affair at first sight. The more I traveled in Mayo, Galway, Limerick and Killarney the more I liked it. I said to myself, 'One day you're going to get yourself a little cottage in the west of Ireland.'"

Three years ago he did it. "I was in a pub," he said, "and I let it be known I was looking for a house." He took another sniff of snuff and went on: "They thought I was rich which I'm not — so they tried to sell me great houses and castles. Finally one fellow said he had a place but he thought it was too small."

"We staggered up here and I peeped through the window. I liked what I saw and I asked the price. 'You've sold a house,' I told him. And he had."

Ives made a film in Dublin last autumn and stayed on in Ireland, hurrying to his house as quickly as he could.

"I had to fly back to the States to do a couple of television shows last winter and this spring, but otherwise, it's been a quiet life in the west of Ireland," he said.

FILM PLANNED

"Well, I'm going over to Denmark soon to make a film. I've got to play a lute. I don't know how I'll manage that, but I'll face that problem when I come to it."

"Then I'm going to New York to rehearse for a play. It's called 'Dr. Cook's Garden' and it's the most exciting play I've read in a long time." Tentatively set to open on Broadway Sept. 25.

After what he hopes will be a long run, Burl plans to return to the west of Ireland and his two-story house called Prospect House. He does not plan to be an Irish citizen.

"No, I'm content to remain an American although I'm still enchanted with Ireland," he said.

Ives' wife, who handles much of his business, spends most of her time in the United States, visiting Ireland occasionally. So when he is in Ireland, Ives is on his own.

He does his own shopping and cooking, and says he enjoys it as he could.

The five acres surrounding Prospect House are covered in hip-high grass. "I never cut it," said Ives. "I like it this way. I like life this way."

"I've never worked very hard, you know. Nothing bugs me. Instead of struggling and fighting to pile up a lot of dough I'd rather be out some place like this having fun, seeing life and seeing people."

Huge Air Base Looks Like Suburbia

Clark in the Philippines is the biggest overseas U. S. Air Base, and it has an extensive array of things — maids, tennis, golf, movies, the works. But there are two larger facts of life for 32,000 Americans — there's a war in Vietnam, and Clark isn't home.

By KELLY SMITH
AP Newsfeatures Writer

CLARK AIR BASE, Philippines (AP) — Picture an American compound where there are 18 tennis courts, a football stadium, a bowling alley open 24 hours a day. Where 6,400 children attend school, 20,000 cars clog the road at rush hour, virtually every family has a maid, the officer's club swings at midnight and the local beer is heady stuff.

This is Clark, the largest U.S. air base overseas, a major support depot to Vietnam, logistic and operational center for Air Force combat in Southeast Asia, and parent protector of an area extending from Burma to Guam, Taiwan to Australia.

In an hour, Clark generates enough electricity to light a 100-watt bulb for 25 years. Every three minutes, 15,000 times a month day and night, a plane lands or takes off.

Life at Clark is a chilling pendulum. F102s scream through the night and war is overhead. Inside a club, couples dine on steak chateaubriand, dance to a combo and war is an ocean away.

VARIED ACTIVITIES

During the day, the 15,000 wives and children can take music, Spanish and horsemanship riding lessons, play an 18-hole golf course, visit a 50,000 volume library, exercise in a fully equipped gymnasium, go to the movies or craft classes, attend summer camp or join the Little League on four baseball diamonds.

During the same day, planes fly in across the South China Sea from Danang, Pleiku and Saigon bringing cargoes of young men, still clothed in bloodied fatigues, aching from wounds of war.

This is not Clark's first war. It was captured by the Japanese in World War II. Clark men died on the Bataan Death March. Nestled under the shadow of craggy Mt. Arayat, 75 miles northwest of Manila, Clark rolls out over 206 square miles of palm, mango and banana trees, sugar cane fields and forest.

Clark is a city of 32,000 Americans and 20,000 working Filipinos. They call themselves "Clarkites." Within the past five years, the base population has doubled. In the last two years, the population has increased 10,000.

Life in this city is much like that in any American city — yet starkly foreign. Driving through the residential areas on 6th street, Davis Avenue, Bong Highway one sees pink, yellow and blue homes, manicured lawns, clotheslines, children playing, bicycles on the curbs, tree-houses, yard furniture. It looks like suburbia.

AWAY FROM HOME

But in one of these homes a father is gone for 60 days in Vietnam with his 13th Tactical Bomber Squadron. In one of those homes lives Mrs. William C. Westmoreland, wife of the U.S. commander in Vietnam.

In the United States, an average family cannot afford fulltime help. At Clark, virtually every home has at least one live-in maid who does almost all cooking, the cooking cleaning, washing and babysitting. Wives admit they are spoiled.

More than any other factor except the war, it's the maid who changes the complexion of family life here. For $20 to $30 a month, a woman is freed of all household tasks. Yet she is an ocean away from home and generally restricted to the base. Life for many an Air Force wife then becomes mixed with boredom, beer, disappointment, fear, disillusionment, letter writing and needlepoint lessons.

"More neurotics and alcoholic women leave Clark than any base we have," says one officer. "But all in all, it's pretty much like any stateside suburb."

In an effort to keep busy, women organize. Three organizations log 1,000 to 10,000 hours a month of volunteer service: the Red Cross which aids the 550-bed hospital; Women's Welfare which tends social and educational welfare needs outside the base complex; and Family Services which helps base families.

There are also sororities, church groups, a ladies golf club, wife groups of every squadron, tennis and baseball teams, and hobby shop activities which claim nearly 40,000 separate visits a month. Children have a summer camp, a kindergarten, Boy and Girl Scouts, every lesson imaginable and schooling up through college.

SOCIAL TIME

Nighttime is social time. A maid makes hostessing at home a simple matter. When not at home, the various officers' and airman's clubs have moderately priced dinners in a tropical atmosphere with excellent dance music.

Each person interviewed, when asked what they did evenings, replied first: "drink." They subsequently remembered other activities.

Over-indulgence can mar a man's career, says an officer. In orientation courses wives are given other don'ts at Clark: don't pull rank on another wife, don't gripe, gossip or be unfaithful to your husband, don't wear hair in curlers in public, don't wear shorts more than four inches above the knees, don't go off the base alone at night.

Most families list the weather as their biggest adjustment — heat and humidity stay around 88. Families are here for a two-year stay, and their furniture is left at home; it would rot in the tropical climate.

The rapid growth of the base has spawned around its periphery a strip of cheap bars, gilly shows, open air markets, prostitution and thievery.

Other portions of the Philippines are not so commercial, but Air Force families have less and less time to see them. Some say they never get to Manila. Some never go to Angeles, the town bordering Clark. With many of the men working six and seven day weeks, most time is spent close to home.

Despite occasional water or power failures, confinement to a general area, frustration of waiting out 8 to 12 months to join their husbands in the first place waiting lists are long because housing is tight, women tend to be optimistic. Like all military wives, they learn to adapt to the moves from one town to another, to look at the brighter side.

"There's a saying that your best posts are your last and your next," says one.

"The one you're at is always the worst." Said Donna Neimi of Stockton, Calif., the mother of four and on her first overseas post: "When the store is out of lettuce for weeks, I just go to Subie, the navy post three hours away. When the monsoons start, I prepare for sick children."

There's the wife of Maj. Frederick Clemenz of Dyer, Ind., who teachers first grade on the base. "I take the children swimming and it rains. Heck. We swim anyway."

There's Helen Golob, wife of a New York City staff sergeant, who's taking bookkeeping two nights a week, works with the Red Cross three days a week and spends one day with local welfare programs.

"My neighbors get bored to death," says Helen. "So I tell them to bake cookies for the Red Cross and they seem relieved to do it."

There's the wife of T. Sgt. James Quaschnick of Sebeka, Minn., pregnant and moved in without pan or sheet. "You make do," she says, smiling. "You like it."

There's pretty Judi Stack, wife of Capt. Thomas L. Stack of Port Arthur, Tex., who waited nearly a year to join her husband and within three months is speaking Tagalog, the national tongue.

SHADOW, PAST, PRESENT

Vietnam, 900 miles to the west, is in the back of everyone's mind, a shadow of what is past and what many are headed for. Though the majority of Clark men do not serve actively in Vietnam, they perform tasks directly related to the war effort.

"Let's face it," says one officer, "we are at Clark because of Vietnam."

The war means that men who used to work five normal shifts a week now work six and seven days a week, says Lt. Col. G. A. Ramsey of San Antonio, Tex. "People are very aware of it, even if they don't talk much about it."

Military officers generally concede that families on a base are a significant morale factor to the individual man, but from a military standpoint they say it fogs up the machinery considerably. Some openly advocate getting rid of women and children — particularly from a war area.

Do Military Chiefs Mean It?

Latest word is that the joint military chiefs of staff provided a large part of the ammunition in the Senate drive to restore military aid provisions cut from President Johnson's foreign assistance bill. The question now is whether the military chiefs are saying what they think or whether President Johnson and Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara are pulling the strings.

Back in the early 1960s, the late President John F. Kennedy put such tight muzzles on the top military men that they were barely able to eat, much less say what they thought. This tight control over the military has continued almost uninterrupted since that time.

A recent near revolt reportedly occurred when General William C. Westmoreland made his latest report to President Johnson on the situation in Vietnam after McNamara had made a trip to Vietnam and had reported to the President that it would not be necessary to increase forces there if those already in Vietnam were "used effectively." This was an insult to Westmoreland and also was grossly misleading, as it seemed to give the impression that Westmoreland was not using the troops to the best advantage.

As a matter of fact, McNamara had been misdirecting the use of the troops, rushing big forces to some areas to wipe out small bands and being caught with inadequate forces in other regions, according to numerous reports sent out by able news analysts.

When Westmoreland appeared before Johnson and asked for an immediate increase in the number of troops, the President was quoted as telling him he had been advised by McNamara that no more troops were needed. When Johnson said that, Westmoreland was reported to have replied: "Mr. President, if that is your position, I am forced to tender my resignation as of now." Johnson quickly replied that he was merely stating what McNamara had told him and that he had not yet made a decision of his own. He eventually agreed to a smaller increase in troops than Westmoreland had asked.

At that time it was reported that some of the top men in the Vietnam area were near a revolt, as far as keeping tight mouths was concerned and that some of them were ready to speak out and give their real views, regardless of such possible consequences as being forced into retirement or being embarrassed by unfavorable transfers. Johnson's agreement to increase the Vietnam forces apparently eased the situation temporarily.

A new clamping on of the tight-lip policy, except to say what President Johnson wants said, leads us to wonder if our high military men really think contributing to the armed forces of other nations will help us. We contributed to Red China's military advancement, including the giving of information that led to development by China of the hydrogen bomb, and all we ever got out of it was an increased danger of being attacked by that nation.

Generally our position is that we should supply the money needed to keep our own forces adequately armed and supplied with munitions and war essentials but is against big armament supplies to other nations at our expense.

One thing that has caused so much dissatisfaction with the Johnson policy in conducting foreign affairs is the fact that we seem to be doing everything possible to avoid winning the war in Vietnam. We are needlessly sacrificing the lives of our servicemen because of our failure to attack vital targets.

Occasionally President Johnson allows a little spurt of attack that seems to be going in the right direction. Each time he does that, Senator J. William Fulbright, an avowed supporter of Senator Robert S. Kennedy, in a so-called Peace Party movement, comes out with an attack on the administration and the President apparently "pulls in his horns." In a recent foray against vital targets, which is what those who favor winning the war want, Fulbright called the Johnson action "stupid."

Sometimes cartoons portray a situation in an extremely graphic and forceful way. Shoemaker, a Monroe Morning World cartoonist, recently showed a giant, muscular boxer, representing United States military forces, sitting in his corner talking advice from his trainer, McNamara. The defense secretary wearing a USA sweater, was saying to him: "Don't punch him in the nose, the eye or the solar plexus — and especially on the chin. It could knock him out." Those words by McNamara have come to size up the way most Americans think the war in Vietnam is being conducted.

If we were absolutely certain that the testimony of the military chiefs of staff represented their true opinions, we would be inclined to attach some weight to those beliefs. Not knowing, we adhere to our opinion that we can't gain much in the way of self-defense and certainly can throw away a lot of money by arming practically every nation in the world at our expense.

Congressman Otto E. Passman of the Fifth Congressional District of Louisiana said recently that the United States is trading with approximately 120 of the 130 nations of the world, including Russia. It is also well known that the United States is giving foreign aid to a vast proportion of those nations, regardless of whether they are communist. Since the United States Export-Import bank has been supplying credit to many of the nations buying arms from us, we wonder whether we are really selling them arms or giving them away.

Although Senator Fulbright seems almost always to take a position opposite from ours in foreign affairs, we sometimes find it difficult to support the national administration, which he is fighting. It was under the leadership of Fulbright that the committee cut more than $700 million from requested authorizations of $3.4 billion.

Fulbright's committee cut $205 million from the $596 million Johnson had requested for military aid and voted to abolish a revolving fund under which the Defense Department guaranteed loans for arms sales to underdeveloped nations.

Despite our frequent opposition to Fulbright proposals, we are forced to agree that we see no benefit to the United States in supplying underdeveloped countries with arms. About all these countries can do is carry on civil wars within their own countries or battle other small countries. How do we benefit there?

The whole foreign affair situation appears to be little better than a mess. We seem to be committed to a policy of not winning the war in Vietnam and to a policy of supplying all nations with arms. Does that in any way contribute to peace throughout the world?

All we can know for certain that it does is require the expenditure of vast billions of American dollars for which the taxpayers of this country are compelled to foot the bill.

Fog Machine

Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

I am wondering if you have a grapevine at the end of your ball point pen? If so can it reach your honorable mayor.

I am only a guest in your fair city seeking relief for a respiratory trouble. That terrible, terrible city fogging machine that spreads that smoke comes without any warning!!! It is almost impossible to get your windows down without inhaling enough to make you deadly sick at the stomach.

It does look like there could be some bell, siren or whistle to warn the people a block off. If I am ever so unfortunate to be caught in the yard there will be one big southern Louisiana mosquito to be sent back to the Bayou Country in a black box. This is a serious plea — not a joking matter — your town people suffer also. No one has spoken up.

Since in Monroe your column (Jes Ramblin) has held a fascination for me, it is the first time I read, look or hunt for in the paper — why? Well, it is one way to learn the customs, and ways of a city, town or territory tells its story well. Keep your Jes' Ramblin' rambling on.

United Nations

West Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

I want to bring to you and readers, some of the things the United Nations are trying to do to the United States and our freedom and to put over it the one World Government, its Communist belief on the United States Citizens.

In Saturday Morning World, Page 7A, you will find the names of members of the General Assembly and their native countries. Read them over and look up their form of Government and you will see who is controlling the United Nations, and thus the United States. You will also be able to see what form of Government U. Thant's Country is.

The Parish Library has a "United Nations monthly Chronical" for the public to read. In the January issue, you will find the United Nations violating their own charter, on page 34 there is an article on United States military bases in Asia, Africa, and Latin America, wanting the United States to move these bases from each Country; so Communism can take the country over easier.

General Moran Ret. spoke in Tulsa, Oklahoma, before a group of Patriotic Americans on the United Nations; his words are the United Nations Charter is the Constitution of the United States, whether you like it or not, and the only thing for the United States to do was to get out of the United Nations and get the United Nations out of this United States.

There is a Bill H.R. 1418; to revoke the United States' membership in the United Nations. I have written Senator Long and Senator Ellender on this bill. Senator Russell Long says he does not like the United Nations.

troubled with complaints of antipoverty workers that his administration hasn't been paying enough attention to the housing, educational and employment problems of the black community.

As a symbol of their discontent, the Negroes raised a rumpus about a statue they claimed was insulting to their race. It was a statue of a little Negro stableboy, conspicuously placed on the front lawn of the Wellson city hall. The statue was intended to represent friendship between the races.

When the Negroes claimed they were insulted by the statue, the mayor decided to do something about it and that is exactly what he did. He had the statue painted white, with baby blue eyes.

Shame America

West Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

(Attached is an editorial from the Baptist Standard of August 2, 1967, published in Dallas, Texas. I think it is appropriate that all our people might read it and would appreciate your printing it in our local Public Forum. T. H. McElroy.)

Hang your head in shame, America! Then go to your knees with a cry for God's forgiveness. Turn about and follow Him. Move quickly or you topple into hell.

The best of your military power is on distant shores. Some fly through the flak of Vietnam; others sash through the mud. The death toll mounts; but you, American, could hardly care less except as the family circle is broken.

Turn in the other direction, America. Your troops still stand guard in Europe lest a third war engulf the same continent within a half-century. You look for friends but find so few you dare not count.

Hang your head in shame, America! Now, anarchy is within your own borders. Civil War II broke out. It may yet erupt into a more deadly tragedy. It is bad enough when National Guardsmen must restore order. It is terrible when Federal troops must be deployed.

Detroit, Newark: Distance may have lent a bit of comfort. But remember there was Birmingham, Houston, and Nashville. It could soon be Dallas, San Antonio, or a dozen other cities. Satan dances with glee. He never had it so good. We are a people unconcerned and uncommitted. We are indifferent despite the screams of sirens and the clanging of every alarm bell.

We leave the Detroit diagnosis to the so-called experts who will make their investigations. Nor will we bother with the particular facts of Newark, Englewood, and the score of other tragedies.

A thumb through two books of history. One is secular. Nations created long before ours rose to world power. They became selfish and indifferent. Disrespect for law grew into disobedience of law. Society collapsed. The nations collapsed — destroyed from within.

Our other book is more than just history. It is a guide which has weathered every challenge in every generation since God first spoke to man. It is a guide with assurance of rewards for obedience; with the certainty of punishment for disobedience.

All the laws of all the lawmakers will not prohibit another Detroit. Neither will all the troops in all the land. Billions of dollars do not eradicate slums. They may help, when wisely spent, but a savage in a mansion is still a savage and the mansion is doomed.

Hang your head in shame, America! Your days are numbered just as surely as they were for Sodom and Gomorrah. They are unless you fall on your knees, beg God's forgiveness, repent and follow Him.

Doning For Country

Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

This country was built and made strong by the sacrifices and contributions of the individuals who compose it. The attitude was to see "What I can do for my country."

Today the reverse is in the minds of a younger generation. After promises of a Utopia and "We never had it so good" philosophy by our late administrations and assurances that the Federal Government will solve all our problems and cure all our ills and quickly, this young generation is disillusioned. They want this promise quickly fulfilled. The attitude seems now to be "What the country should do for me," jobs, secured incomes, housing, recreation etc.

If the country (our society) was built by the work and sacrifices of the individual then the tearing down (or reverse) will inevitably happen if individuals sap the public trough and take from instead of contributing to. If individual support and contribution builds, then sapping from the public treasury will tear down.

These young rioters need but to read some of the history of any country or society that has risen to maturity and they will see how juvenile their philosophy is, and immature their behavior is.

Order Is Destroyed

Girard, La.

To the Editor:

To say that rioting, looting, killing, murdering, beating, burning, destroying, stealing, disobeying law, order, rules and regulations by civil process of local, federal governments is a proper course is far from the truth (fact) before the entire world. Not even the best of politicians can convert such order into order in supporting such outrages, not in any way connected with civil rights, is wrong.

This bill was thoroughly discussed for weeks in the Congress. By eminent lawyers, and students of constitutional sovereign rights of states, and communities. Who opposed such legislation. That was to destroy the rights of the citizens of their heritage, and to be safe in their homes, and communities as individuals, exercising their God given rights, in forming such rules of law best suited for the protection of life, liberty, and property under the very constitution given them.

Civil rights so-called and entitled such, were fomented and forebode, by the subtle hands of the betrayers of trust and enemies of American people. This segment has openly avowed and declared it will burn and destroy America boasting, defiance of the law, and the President's proclamations, "That we will burn down, and even destroy Washington D.C." is more than we, the People, should be asked to tolerate. We won't. The public should not be expected to remain silent. The news media should open their columns to the expressions in opposition to such savagery. To remain silent when we should speak out against such tragedy makes cowards of us all.

Supersonic Transport Aircraft Is Essential

JOSEPH WOOD Krutch, the naturalist, raised a question the other day in Saturday Review that merits prayerful thought: In its pursuit of the good life, is our civilization driving toward self-destruction instead?

The reporter who trudged around Washington this week could find the question present in a dozen forms. Up in the Senate Office Building, an appropriations subcommittee was hearing testimony on the supersonic transport plane. Across the Hill, a House committee was listening to some sobering data on mounting air pollution. Downtown, the National Academy of Sciences was protesting a British plan to build an airfield on the last unspoiled island in the Indian Ocean. Through the open window of my office, a morning breeze brings the splintering crash of glass and timbers: Two blocks of old but habitable houses are yielding to a six-lane super-highway. Overhead, an outboard jet spreads a plume of dark pollution on the sky.

WHAT HAS BECOME of our sense of values? That is the question Dr. Krutch presents. But he has a graver question: Even if men were disposed to reject some of the changes they provisionally class as "progress," has society passed the point of no return? Are we condemned to an irresistible technology that spawns inevitable inventions, and then feeds upon its young?

Some of these issues lay beneath the surface of this week's hearings on the SST. All morning long, we sat and heard the FAA's General J. C. Maxwell review the progress of work on this incredible machine. When it goes into service five years hence, the SST will carry 280 passengers seven miles above the earth; she will fly New York to Paris in three hours. The experts are agreed: The United States must build this plane; if we don't, the British, or the French, or the Russians will. We cannot withdraw from the race.

YET THE SST, flying at its most efficient speed, will trail in its wake a "sonic boom signature" 60 miles wide. Unless the plane is to be restricted to subsonic speeds over land, every human being down below will yield some part of his quietude to the convenience of the 280 passengers up above. But that is not a fair statement of the balance sheet. The SST will create 50,000 jobs directly, 250,000 indirectly; it will represent an initial investment of $1.4 billion; sales to foreign airlines will improve the U.S. balance of trade. If the plane were restricted to sea routes only, 500 units might be sold by 1990; net return to the government, $1.1 billion. But if its use were unrestricted? Sales could reach 1,200 units. Net return to the government, $3.2 billion. What price quietude below?

The same issues were broodingly present in the hearings on air pollution. Given the wrong combination of atmospheric factors, said a witness, the nation's auto-crowded capital could experience an "air pollution disaster" — and Washington ranks far down the list of smog-ridden cities. Welfare Secretary Gardner looked grimly to the day when citizens may have to go abroad in gas masks, seeking fresh air at public stations.

BUT ARE automobiles to be abolished? Power plants shut down? Great industries put under padlock? Death by air pollution is a monstrous prospect. The economic alternatives of pollution prevention are monstrous too. So we build greater highways to accommodate more cars to bring the smog a little sooner to our cities.

What are we gaining? Last week brought a report from British biologists, recently returned from Antarctica. They had collected penguin eggs and fish livers from the bottom of the world — and found, even there, traces of pesticides blown by the winds.

Perhaps the island of Aldabra will be saved. That is the coral atoll, 260 miles from Madagascar, which naturalists acclaim as the last unspoiled refuge of certain birds and giant tortoises. The proposed British airfield would destroy the ecological balance. But who cares for the pink-footed booby? Man craves progress! But does he really crave it? And is progress really what he's getting?

Congressmen Against Rat Bill Are Rapped

CONGRESSMEN who voted against the so-called rat bill are being abused in many quarters as heartless. They are said to have turned a deaf ear to one of the most painful problems of the big-city poor.

This is not the case. Those who opposed the bill may have taken the only position which, in the long run would really help the big cities handle the problem of rats. Those who supported the bill, on the other hand, despite their good intentions, may unwittingly be the best friends the rats ever had.

Stripping away the emotional and largely misinformed packaging with which this matter has been turned into a political issue, here are the facts.

THE ERADICATION of rats in our big cities is not a matter of ivory-tower theorizing. So long as the estimated 90 million rats in America have food they will have the chance to breed. Denying them food is a matter of garbage handling, storage, wall construction and so forth in the big cities.

Already the federal government operates three separate programs to help control rats — largely in providing research data and in killing rats in federal office buildings around the country. The new proposal would have added 40 million federal dollars to those programs, extending federal participation in the rat fight into the cities.

The effect should be obvious. As in every other instance of federal programs being superimposed on local problems, it would dry up all local initiative. Instead of having local governments press ahead with rat control programs which they either now maintain or which local pressures could make them begin, the local officials could be expected to let everything wait until the federal dollars began to flow.

AND THOSE DOLLARS, at the 40-million level, would hardly dent the surface as a replacement of local programs. Experts estimate that the federal rat fight would grow quickly into the hundreds of millions of dollars per year as local programs were killed off or called off by the intrusion of the federal program.

There are those who brush aside practical politics and economics and say the only thing that matters is to pass the rat bill as a step toward easing the tensions that cause riots. The implication is that rats are such a scourge in the big cities, biting so many children, for instance, that they are a major factor in the riots.

The facts are far different. Detroit has one of the most effective local rat control programs in the world. Rat bites there have been reduced from 123 cases in 1951 to fewer than 20 cases a year now. Milwaukee also has an extensive rat control program. Both cities have been brutally afflicted by riots which have done more damage in a night than rats do in years.

AS TO THE EXTENT of rat bites as a cause of big-city peril, New York City provides some useful statistics. More than 28,000 dog bites were reported last year. Cat bites totaled more than 1,500. Rat bites accounted for 562 reports. Nevertheless, New York is about to launch a significant rat control program — the sort which would be the first to suffer if the federal government were to take over the fight.

For proof of the pudding you need look only as far as the current programs of the federal government in sewer construction — a matter closely related to rat control. As soon as federal funds became available for local sewage systems, reports flowed in from every section of the country of local bond issues and other programs which had promptly been scrapped. Why do the job at home, it was said, when federal money is just around the corner?

Really Only Skin Deep?

One of the strangest delusions under which Negroes have labored ever since they were freed from slavery under the presidency of the late Abraham Lincoln is that all of their troubles and so-called lack of equality with white people are caused by the difference in the color of their skin. It apparently has been useless to point out to them that other characteristics have had far more to do with their being "deprived" people.

In Wellson, Mo., the mayor will do almost anything he can to brighten the spirits of the Negro constituency.

The World's Week In Focus

Rampaging Flood Hits Fairbanks; King Sounds Off Again; Rights Bill Passes

By Oland Silk

WINTER temperatures have been known to drop 60 below zero in Fairbanks, Alaska. Last week the city of 30,000 was treated to a deep summer freak of nature — a rampaging flood that claimed several lives, wrecked homes and businesses, and forced evacuation into nearby hills.

Friday, thousands of refugees waited as the muddy waters of the Chena River which bisects the city receded slowly. Down below 95 per cent of the homes and businesses lay caked in mud.

The only cheerful news was a White House announcement declaring Fairbanks and other sections a disaster area. President Johnson made available $1 million in emergency funds. It was the second such designation for Alaska in three years. Anchorage and south Central Alaska were declared a disaster area following the 1964 earthquake.

The Chena began its onslaught after heavy rains dumped more than six inches of water on Fairbanks in one week. In the mountains, heavy snows were melted by rain that washed down in torrents, building the flow into the city to an estimated 15 billion gallons of water per day. This is enough water to supply New York City for two weeks.

An Associated Press dispatch described Fairbanks this way:

WATER IS EVERYWHERE. "It surges against buildings and homes and cars and trucks, abandoned by their owners as they sought to escape the rapidly rising water."

"The main streets . . . the side streets and the main highways leading in and out of town, are strewn with abandoned vehicles, literally hundreds of them, of all shapes and sizes. Some lie in waters midway up to their doors, some have only their tops showing above the brown sea that has engulfed Fairbanks."

River boats and helicopters darted and flew everywhere picking up the stranded.

Throughout its history, first as a rough mining camp and later as a major distribution hub for the vast Alaskan interior, Fairbanks has contended yearly with the Chena River. This year was no exception, but the heavy rains complicated matters, to say the least, four days and nights.

Despite the tragedy in Fairbanks and other central Alaska towns.

ALASKA Boosters were not disheartened. The Travel Division, recalling the sharp decline in tourist business following the earthquake, pointed out that "Alaska is a giant state and 99 per cent of the state hasn't been touched by the floodwaters."

"We urge tourists to continue their Alaskan adventures. The Arctic, the south-central region around Anchorage, the Kenai Peninsula and the south-east panhandle are now at their Summer finest."

King Rejects LBJ

REV. MARTIN Luther King called for a mass civil disobedience campaign — involving boycotts, sit-ins at factories and camp-ins in Washington. The Alabama-born civil rights leader said America was moving toward a critical crossroads of new gains for Negroes — or violent insurrection.

King said he was motivated to announce the campaign this week by the growing violent temper of many Negroes. Asked if his new move was aimed at countering support by Black Power spokesman, King replied that he was not singling out Black Power. "I'm just dealing with the whole violent development."

King made his appraisal following a speech to delegates to the Southern Christian Leadership Conference of which he is president. No other course but mass civil disobedience was open, King said, noting the "total inability and failure of Congress to grapple constructively with the problems of deprivation and poverty."

SECRETARY OF the Treasury Henry Fowler, left, talks with Rep. Wilbur Mills, D-Ark., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, before the start of hearings on the Johnson Administration's proposed 10 per cent surtax on personal and corporate incomes. Fowler failed in two days of hearings to make a case. Mills ordered a revamp of the President's proposal dealing with exemptions for low income taxpayers, and adjourned the hearings until next week. A tax increase appears inevitable, but not amount requested.

THE CAMPAIGN will begin this year. By Friday, King joined the more violent anti-Johnson Negroes by declaring he would not support the President in 1968 due to his stand on Vietnam.

The House, meanwhile, passed the 1967 Civil Rights Bill. The measure would forbid actual or attempted intimidation or disruption, on racial or political grounds, of persons lawfully exercising specified civil rights, such as:

VOTING, attending public schools, using public accommodations and public facilities, serving on state and local juries, and participating in federally assisted programs.

Penalties would be up to one year and a $1,000 fine. Serious body injury could bring up to 10 years and $10,000 fine. Death could result in life imprisonment. It was the fourth rights bill adopted by the House in four years. The vote was 326 to 93.

THE BILL is now under consideration by the Senate constitutional rights subcommittee. Before it can be acted on by the Senate, it must pass through the Judiciary Committee, dominated by southerners.

Sen. Philip Hart, D-Mich., floor leader for the legislation, said it was impossible to predict the future of the bill because its fate is entwined with other measures. He saw the possibility of the House-passed bill being wrapped up in an omnibus anti-crime measure that would also include the Southern-backed anti-riot bill and on wiretapping.

Senate sources said an attempt might be made to bypass the Judiciary Committee and put the House version on the floor for debate. A southern filibuster was forecast, however, if the tactic is used.

A BROADCAST, monitored in Miami, told of a world-wide campaign to demand a guarantee of safety for Black Power leader Stokely Carmichael. The State Department plans to revoke his passport for visiting Cuba. No one knows where Carmichael is, but when found Barry Goldwater thinks he should be tried for treason, and if found guilty, executed. The former Arizona senator told newsmen Carmichael should be arrested when he sets foot on American soil.

In Montgomery, Alabama school officials said Negro and white teachers are reluctant to transfer to schools now predominantly of the opposite race. In rural Lowndes County, where Negroes outnumber whites 4 to 1 and where the school board has been directed to "take affirmative steps" toward faculty integration, every white teacher has resigned except at one school. In Selma, however, more white than Negro teachers have volunteered for desegregation assignments.

ALABAMA IS under statewide orders to escalate the pace of racial integration in schools this fall. There is token mixing in the classrooms, but faculties will be desegregated for the first time. The announced goal is at least two teachers of the minority race, white or Negro, in every school, "insofar as administratively feasible."

IN SYRACUSE, New York, violence erupted Wednesday night. Mayor William Walsh imposed a 10-hour curfew to curb vandalism. Twenty seven persons were arrested on charges ranging from public drunkenness to burglary. Police were granted "blanket permission to use whatever means necessary" to preserve order.

Nashville's "Liberation School," a Black Power institution, was evicted from church and hospital property after anti-poverty funds were cut off. The school was found to teach "pure, unadulterated hatred for the white race." Its teacher had the pupils, aged 6 to 12, re-enact the Nat Turner slave rebellion in a city park.

THE STUDENT Non-Violent Coordinating Committee — a misnomer of the first rank — charged that Jews are committing atrocities against Arabs. The charge brought quick objections from Jewish and civil rights leaders.

One such leader said SNCC's anti-Israeli demonstrations reflect a "complete divorce from the opinions and aspirations of American Negroes."

Bears On Rampage

RANGERS IN Montana's Glacier National Park killed two grizzly bears believed to be the ones that fatally mauled two 19-year-old girls last Sunday. The victims, killed in separate attacks, were Julie Helgeson of Albert Lea, Minn., and Michele Koons of San Diego.

Carcasses of the two grizzlies will have to be dismembered, refrigerated and transported to a laboratory for detailed examination before they can be confirmed as the killers.

THE MADDENED bears attacked the girls in their sleeping bags. One boy, Roy Ducat, 18, of Perysburg, Ohio, was seriously injured. The vicious and unusual attacks have been 57 years since grizzlies attacked a human in the park — left the beautiful mountain area grief-stricken.

ONE OF the biggest problems in the Park, an official noted, is the refusal of the camping public to pay attention to signs warning about the presence of grizzlies. "They read the signs," he said, "and they go out and camp anyway."

Scientists predicted more encounters between bears and man with the increase of visitors in grizzly country. Hiking trails were re-opened in two parks areas after the fatal maulings.

In other violence involving strictly homo sapiens:

The wife of a Tennessee sheriff was shot to death by night riders as she accompanied her husband on a night call in McNairy County at the Mississippi state line. Sheriff Buford Pusser was shot and wounded in the attack. His wife, Pauline, was killed when a volley of shots erupted from a car behind them as they traveled a lonely country road.

The attack was blamed on moonshine and gambling elements who haunt the Mississippi border. Pusser had declared war on them and apparently the night call was a plot to eliminate him.

In Laurel, Miss., a guard employed by the strike-plagued Masonite plant was cut down with two blasts of buckshot in the face. The plant struck April 21 when 2,100 members of International Woodworkers of America walked off their jobs. Since then the company has been hiring non-union workers and the plant is operating at full capacity. It produces more than one billion square feet of hard board and has a yearly payroll of $18 million.

LAUREL IS in Jones County and has a population of 30,000. The area has a history of violence due to the presence of a large Ku Klux Klan element and the Masonite labor troubles.

In other domestic news, the Johnson Administration marshaled its forces to fight for elimination of tough new welfare restrictions on unwed mothers included in the sweeping Social Security bill passed by the House. The Senate Finance Committee gets the measure next week.

John Gardner, Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, and Roy Wilkins, NAACP chief, attacked the new rules which are aimed primarily at training unwed mothers for jobs and getting them off relief rolls.

Otherwise, the bill, which has bipartisan support, calls for a minimum monthly Social Security benefit of $50, compared to the current $44. It would also increase from $1,500 to $1,680 the amount a retired person can earn annually and still draw all his Social Security benefits.

Regarding the unwed provision, Rep. Wilbur Mills, D-Ark., drew thunderous applause as floor manager of the bill when he told the House that unwed mothers were making "a way of life" of living off welfare and that Congress should no longer tolerate the rising illegitimacy rate.

"We're rough in this bill," he said, his voice rising to a shout. "We intend to be rough in this bill . . . but we are not inhuman."

Over the past 10 years, the Aid to Dependent Children (ADC), which is by far the largest federal welfare program, has increased from 646,000 families with 2.4 million children to 1.2 million families with nearly 5 million children.

The measure ultimately should result in pushing 300,000 adult recipients off welfare rolls and into jobs. It would also provide a 12.5 per cent increase in monthly benefits for some 23 million men and women.

To pay for the increases, the current maximum $280.40 in payroll taxes would jump to $448.40 by 1987.

A battle royal either in the Senate or in the Senate-House conference is expected over the ADA restrictions.

Collision Course

THE SENATE and House were also on another collision course. Senators insisted they won't back down from a decision to curb the Administration's overseas assistance program. The Senate passed 60 to 26 Thursday after four days of debate a foreign-aid authorization bill $837 million below the $3.4 billion sought by Johnson. It was also $537 million below the $3.1 billion recommended last week by the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

The Senate-passed bill carries a provision to abolish the President's power to add countries to the aid list without congressional approval. And it would bar aid to any country that has broken diplomatic relations with the United States.

The ban is aimed specifically at the Arab-bloc countries that broke with the United States in the Middle East crisis.

In a news conference scheduled after press time for this column, President Johnson was expected to have comment about this and other congressional doings.

Senator William Fulbright was the main thorn in the Administration's side last week in Senate affairs. He was partly responsible for whacking the foreign assistance program and vowed he would not give in to the House when time came for working out differences.

And he was exasperated at Undersecretary of State Nicolas Katzenbach who assured the Senate that 1) air raids within 10 miles of Red China did not mean there was danger of Peking entering Vietnam war and 2) the Administration was opposed to the Fulbright resolution to require congressional, as well as presidential action, if the United States is to be committed to any course abroad.

FULBRIGHT, a constant critic of the Vietnam war, has sought to re-establish congressional influence in foreign affairs.

Katzenbach said he doubted if any President had ever acted to the full limits of his authority in the foreign field, and conceded "there can be no question that he acts most effectively when he acts with the support and authority of Congress."

The Presidential election in Vietnam had Congress in a stew. Senator Robert Kennedy labeled the campaign a "farce" because of rather high-handed activities of the Thieu-Ky government ticket. Civilian candidates have complained of abuse and attempts at vote fraud. The leading civilian contender, Tran Van Huong, implied that soldiers would be able to vote twice for his military opponents — once at their bases and once at home. He said soldiers had been issued voting cards from their base district and their home district.

JOHNSON assailed critics of attempts at democracy in Vietnam. He told an audience at the White House that both General Thieu and Premier Ky had solemnly pledged they will respect the outcome of fair elections.

There has been speculation that if the government ticket lost, the civilian victors would be thrown out or undermined in some way. Thieu and Ky have not appeared at any rallies.

RONALD AUGUST, left, bites his tongue as he talks to patrolman Robert Paille, after August was ordered to stand trial in the killing of a Negro in a Detroit motel during the recent riots. Charges against Paille were dismissed because of insufficient evidence. August will stand trial for the murder of Aubrey Pollard, 19. Paille had been accused of the murder of Fred Temple, 18. Patrolman August admitted that he killed a Negro at the Algiers Motel, but pleaded self-defense.

The Week's Twin Cities-Area News In Review

By RICHARD TYLER

World Staff Writer

If any place in town was doing brisker business last week than the Monroe Civic Center box office it was the office of Ouachita Parish Democratic Chairman Burt W. Sperry. In each case, the scene approximated a Siege of Vicksburg in miniature.

Of course, in other particulars, the similarity ended. The Civic Center was opening ticket sales for Holiday on Ice International, its first arena attraction, set for Sept. 13-17, while Sperry was qualifying candidates for almost two score ward and parish offices to be voted on Nov. 4.

Holiday on Ice has to do with pretty people going skating. The method of locomotion, which had turned out by Friday for the political races is running. While perhaps a little too early to run two and a half months before the first primary — a host of the candidates already were jogging.

And Sperry's office certainly was not the only one serving the political aspirations of the citizenry. Ouachita Republicans were pounding the drums to call up candidates, while other Democratic qualifying was underway almost throughout the area.

In addition, two special elections — to coincide with the regular primaries and general election in February — were spicing the interest of both parties. Sights were being levelled on a West Monroe alderman seat and a seat on the Monroe School Board.

There was action throughout the news spectrum last week. There was ground to be broken for a new lock and dam at Jonesville, a Soybean Festival to be held and a queen to be crowned, new buildings to occupy or dedicate, meetings to be met and construction to advance. The proposed discontinuance of certain passenger train service through the Twin Cities attracted wide attention and so did yet another round in the seesaw battle of south Monroe air pollution.

But if the week had been given a name, it would have been called Politics.

BIG VOTES AHEAD

If the turnout of candidates may be construed an indication of voter interest, record votes doubtless lie ahead in the November and December primaries. For representative, six Democrats, including both incumbents — Lawrence Gibbs and George Wood — had tied the mark by late Friday morning, with at least two announced candidates — Shady Wall and Howard Barker — expected to qualify momentarily. At the post were Pete Medak, S. N. Cerniglia, James L. Dennis and Willie Haynes Jr. The G.O.P. qualified Ralph Caldwell.

Breezing toward the 5 p.m. Monday qualifying deadline without opposition were Sheriff Bailey Grant, Clerk of Court B. S. McRaney Sr., Assessor Odus Russell and Dr. J. W. Cummins, coroner, but police jurors found their situation the exact opposite. By Friday, that scramble for 19 seats had produced 45 hopefuls, including 17 of the incumbents. More Democrats and several Republicans will be mounted for the race before deadline. Only M. W. Montgomery, Ward 3, and Ward 10's John Ensminger, running for the Senate, were not trying to hold on to their chairs as jurors.

Qualifying for the Senate Derby ended the preceding Saturday, by the way, and wound up with a field of five after the two seats to represent Ouachita, Morehouse, East and West Carroll Parish. Ensminger was there, along with four other locals — incumbent James Adcock, W. E. Whetstone, Howard Griffith and William D. Brown. Oak Grove's Jimmy Myrick gave the matter "serious consideration," though he remained unentered. His father, current Sen. Spencer Myrick, is running for insurance commissioner.

In other qualifying which ended on the 12th, Monroe Mayor W. L. Howard and Fred Huenefeld Jr. found themselves the only candidates for three Ouachita Parish seats on the Democratic state central committee. Rep. Lawrence Gibbs not choosing to run again. Said committee, when newly-formed, presumably will appoint a third Ouachita delegate.

Elsewhere down the line, the various races for constable in the parish, by Friday, had yielded eight candidates, the faces for justice of the peace, five.

In West Monroe, Democrats had held off two contenders for the place on the board of aldermen vacated by the unheld and qualified were L. O. "Sam" Yeager and William C. "Bill" Rocha, with a third possibility examining the situation. While they had no quick qualifications, Republicans were talking in terms of at least one candidate, both for alderman and for Ward 5 police juror.

The Monroe Democratic executive committee, meanwhile, after a painstaking examination of the facts satisfied itself that a special election for the City School Board seat of the resigned Billy Hargis was necessary. Accordingly, the committee met Thursday afternoon and opened a seven-day qualifying period for prospective candidates. The fact that the session came 12 days after the state central committee meeting, rather than the 10 specified in election procedures, apparently is expected to have no bearing on scheduling the election to coincide with regular ones.

Derwood Cann, serving in Hargis' place after appointment last month by Gov. John McKeithen, said he is considering a run for the seat. He is due to serve until he or a successor is chosen in the special election necessitated since more than a year remained on the Hargis term.

Elsewhere in northeast Louisiana, a full field of candidates was lining up for the primary, signaling probable runoffs in nearly every parish. A surprise during the week was the withdrawal from the run for the governorship of Pollock oilman Perry "Buster" Coleman. Saying that he was encouraged to run by "financial backers" of U.S. Rep. John Rarick, another gubernatorial candidate, Coleman said Rarick was "hitchhiking a political ride on racial strife and violence."

Also something of a surprise was the decision not to qualify for the lieutenant governorship by Monroe's James W. Moore. Though he had said he would be a candidate regardless of the action of Lt. Gov. C. C. Aycock, the decision followed soon after Aycock's public alliance with the McKeithen ticket, rather than a run for governor himself. With a glance at the governor's chair four years hence, when McKeithen cannot run, Moore said he made up his mind after "serious consideration and on the advice of Gov. John McKeithen." Having recently turned down the post of highway director, he said he will continue to be administration leader for highway and bridge affairs.

BUILDING, BUILDING In a growing community and area, building is a prime topic on almost a weekly basis. It certainly was a prime topic last week.

To begin with, the Monroe Utilities Commission's commercial department this very day is winding up its move to a new approximately $125,000 home at St. John and Grammont. Everything is being shifted over the weekend and business without interruption will resume Monday morning, Commercial Manager Mike Tarver assured.

Addressed 127 St. John, it's a facility to be proud of and the commission is. Besides providing some 2,000 feet of more and better-arranged work space, the building offers the quality basic features of ending $600 per month rental fees on former quarters in a nearby hotel. Expected to meet the demands of 12 to 15 years hence and including off-street parking, the building has expansion room behind. Formal dedication will be held "soon."

In point of numbers of buildings to be dedicated, however, the hands-down winner in the week's local news was the Ouachita Parish Police Jury. Jury spokesmen and those of the citizens' committee which designed and promoted parish fire protection have scheduled formal dedication of Ouachita fire-fighting facilities and open houses at all four rural stations.

Dedication, presentation of awards and special entertainment will be the business of a barbecue program the night of Aug. 24 for city, parish and area government leaders, civic leaders, state delegates, top fire fighters and others. Master of ceremonies for the affair, at Station 1 on Fink's Highway Road, will be Citizens' Committee Chairman Fred Huenefeld Jr. The following day, Aug. 25 — 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. — the general public will be guest of honor as the doors of all parish stations are thrown open for inspection and visitation. Police jurors and others will be greeting callers.

For sheer size of undertaking and overall significance, this week's award winner probably would have to be the groundbreaking Friday for another lock and dam in the nine-foot system on the Ouachita River — this at Jonesville. Including also construction of an 18-mile-long diversion canal, the total cost will run to $35-million. All is part of an $80-million channel deepening from Camden, Ark., to Jonesville, counting other locks at Columbia, Felsenthal, Ark., and Calhoun, Ark. The full project, certain to mushroom an already healthy river commerce, is due for completion by 1975.

Among a raft of dignitaries on hand for the occasion were U.S. Rep. Otto E. Passman, U.S. Rep. Speedy O. Long and Col. Felix R. Garrett of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. The program was part of the simultaneously running annual Soybean Festival. That extravaganza ended last night with the coronation of a new queen.

Still in the area, the new home of the 122-year-old Union Fraternal Masonic Lodge No. 53 was dedicated in Farmerville last Sunday, attended by a crowd of several hundred. And, in Ruston, a $1.1-million building program at Ruston High School was marked for completion by Jan. 1, including gymnasium, library, cafeteria, laboratory, a business education complex, office space and language lab, along with appropriate lounge and parking facilities.

Meanwhile, back in Monroe, also last Sunday, ground was broken for the new $109,000 office building of St. Paul's Methodist Church. Completion is anticipated in 10 to 12 months.

Later in the week it was passenger train service through the Twin Cities — specifically Missouri Pacific's daily No. 31 and No. 32 from Little Rock to Alexandria — that was the center of attention. The occasion was a hearing — one of three being held by an Interstate Commerce Commission examiner — in the federal courtroom at the Monroe Post Office.

Mo-Pac proposed on July 17 to discontinue the service and drew prompt opposition from Monroe, West Monroe, the chambers of commerce, the police jury and the Louisiana Public Service Commission. Hearings in Monroe, Little Rock and Alexandria were the result, with an ICC decision due no later than Nov. 17, after which, without a decision, the railroad would have a free hand to act. In any case, it was pointed out, a commission ruling would have force for only one year, though further action might come at that time.

Some of the verbal opposition to ending the service came Thursday from West Monroe Mayor Bert Hutton, Monroe City Atty. Haynes Harkey, State Rep. George Wood, Parish Assessor Odus Russell, Monroe Chamber Manager Jim Williams, police jurors Bernie Van and Curtis Joiner and Dr. R. W. Dickenhorst. Public Service Commission Chairman John Hunt of Monroe was due to testify Friday in Alexandria.

The Twin Cities and parish, at the same time, were hat-in-hand in anticipation of another federal decision as well. It was noted at a Ouachita School Board that the way may be opening for further federal court action in the fall since only four teachers have been assigned to schools previously segregated to include students predominantly of a race other than their own. The board placed two white teachers at Richwood High and one Negro teacher each at Ouachita High and West Monroe High. Sixty-six Negro students have asked transfer to previously all-white schools in the system, though no white students have asked to attend Negro schools.

How the courts will react remains to be seen in the fall.

CENTER DEDICATION

Plans were going ahead during the week in no uncertain terms to make dedication of the Monroe Civic Center, Sept. 24, a memorable event on several levels. The advertising subcommittee of a special dedication committee formulated plans to tie in the program with a Friday and Saturday "Civic Center - Progress Days" shopping promotion on the weekend of the dedication.

Signs, slogans and bumper stickers are in the works, according to committee chairman Garland Shell. Dedication plans became a little firmer with the announcement of the coming to Monroe of namesake Vaughn Monroe, well-known pop orchestra leader. Monroe will become the "Voice of Monroe" in local singing and speaking appearances, as well as in narration of a movie on the city's progress.

Some 30 Louisiana, Texas, Arkansas, Mississippi and Tennessee newsmen are being invited to a V.I.P. tour of the $5.5-million Civic Center, while the facility's conference hall will get its first use as a banquet for local and area leaders Aug. 31. Featured speaker for dedication will be U.S. Sen. Russell Long.

Meanwhile, as mentioned at the outset, ticket sales for Holiday on Ice, the first attraction in the Civic Center arena, are lively. The duets are available in the conference hall general office Tuesday through Saturday.

NAMES IN NEWS

A syllogism: names make news; there was lots of news last week; therefore, lots of names were making news. Beginning with a false premise, syllogisms can be made to reach any conclusion. Every point of this one, however, is true. To wit:

Wilbur Keko — Commercial Solvents Corporation plant manager at Sterling — made Sterlington Area chairman of the coming Ouachita Parish United Givers' Fund campaign.

James A. Williamson — of 131 Englewood Dr., Monroe — appointed as assistant to parish Veterans' Service Officer Cecil J. Stevens.

Lt. Walter Lamar Duckworth Jr., — of 4806 Blanks Monroe — a Monroe airman awarded the Silver Star for gallantry in action in Vietnam, just home and bringing with him also 42 air medals, plus recommendations for the Bronze Star and the Distinguished Flying Cross.

Capt. and Mrs. Ronald C. Greene — commanding officers of Ouachita's Salvation Army for the past four years — transferred, effective Aug. 30, to Anniston, Ala., to be succeeded by Maj. and Mrs. Robert White of Huntsville, Ala.

Jimmy Plaisance — local radio executive — badly burned about the legs and arms Tuesday night when an explosion and fire destroyed the moored houseboat of which he was co-owner.

Dr. Anna Helen Gallagher — former head of Northeast's Department of Nursing — accepted a position, effective Aug. 31, with the State University of New York.

Miss Alma L. Lufey — former dean of women at Northeast — requested and received reassignment as an assistant registrar, to be replaced this fall by Miss Martha Madden of Shreveport.

Hilltop Temple Conversation Center For Great Thinkers

Atop an emerald hill in Santa Barbara, Calif., stands a Grecian temple dedicated to the idea that 'talk is golden.' It is the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions, sometimes called an 'egghead monastery.' It is in 'the peace business,' and some people think that's important enough to kick in $1.2 million a year to keep the talk going.

By RALPH DIGHTON
Associated Press Writer

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — On a grassy hilltop above this place, a haven of retired wealthy sits a pillared monument to the peace business.

The impressive white structure, reminiscent of a small Grecian temple devoted to some minor god, is the home of the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions.

Through its portals pass some of the great minds of our times, and some not so great. All go there for one thing: To talk. And not necessarily about democracy.

Talked-about matters of words prevail in print and on tape. The only tangible product the center's 450 founding members see for the $1 million-plus they contribute each year, and it ranges from the abstractness of some business to the heart of nuclear war.

Center President Robert Maynard Hutchins, once a controversial educator and for the past 16 years a recognized genius in attracting and disbursing huge sums of tax-exempt philanthropic funds, believes that the old motto is wrong: It is talk, not silence, that is golden.

He has coined another: "Feel Free," and this has drawn to the center such free-thinkers and free-talkers as its outspoken disbeliever in the Virgin birth and other dogma: Nobel Peace Prize winner J. Edgar Hoover, a distinguished scientist who once picketed the White House in his fight to ban the bomb; Harvey Wheeler, a political scientist who helped write the novel "Fail-Safe"; and Rexford G. Tugwell, a controversial "brain trust" in the Roosevelt era.

Revising the art of conversation—Hutchins prefers to call it dialogue—is one of the main reasons for the existence of the center.

"We have a double aim," says Hutchins. "Our public aim, what we do of interest to the world, is to attempt to identify the basic issues confronting modern society. The other aim, perhaps more important on the long run, is to establish communications between thinking men."

Originally the center, a $15-million spinoff from the multibillion-dollar Ford Foundation, was set up to fight the tactics of the late Sen. Joseph McCarthy.

That was eight years ago.

Encouraged by what its founders believed was success, against McCarthyism, the center set out to find larger and larger social goals. It aimed at first at such issues of the day as religion in government, civil right, and automation versus the labor union.

Then three years ago about the time it started appealing publicly for funds to replace the exhausted Ford Foundation money, the center began to take on more of an international tinge.

First major result of this trend was the Pacem in Terris convocation in New York in 1963. A $200,000 center-funded venture into world politics. At this meeting, 2,500 delegates from 19 countries debated the wisdom of coexistence as defined by Pope John XXIII in his 1963 encyclical.

This was followed by Pacem in Terris II, which drew 400 representatives from 71 nations to Geneva last May. The second venture, which cost about $500,000, had a broader purview. Hutchins called it an attempt to clarify the most important issue in modern times: Life or death. Its premise was that mere coexistence was unstable—witness the war in Vietnam—and that means should be sought for achieving a full and lasting peace.

"WORLD GOVERNMENT" VIEW

One of the means that emerged was a long-favored project at the center: world government. Anyone who regards such activities as presumptuous for a small cadre of intellectuals who represent no one but themselves will find little to dispute at the center.

Harry Ashmore, a Pulitzer Prize winner, editor, is the No. 2 man at the center and was the prime mover in setting up Pacem in Terris II. As Ashmore sees it, the center backed into the peace business, apparently because we have the only game in town. It may not be perfect, but it's the only game going. Rather obviously, it's something people want and the response has been unbelievable.

Hutchins takes a somewhat different view. "The only thing that happened after Pacem in Terris I was that President Johnson escalated the war in Vietnam," he says.

However, the convocation did make a considerable impression on others, such that we were encouraged to set up Pacem in Terris II in the belief that it might be possible to reach a better understanding of coexistence.

ONCE "BOY WONDER"

Hutchins, tall, white haired, still slender and handsome at 62, has always been a liberal if not revolutionary thinker. Once the "boy wonder" of education —has been dean of the Yale Law School at 28 and president of the University of Chicago at 30—Hutchins made national headlines in 1939 by taking Chicago out of intercollegiate football. He left the University of Chicago in 1951 and joined the Ford Foundation as an associate director under Paul Hoffman, who now heads the $200-million-a-year United Nations Development Fund.

In 1951 the Ford Foundation set up the Fund for the Republic, with Hutchins as president. Its endowment of $15 million was turned over five years later to its off-spring, the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions.

The year the Fund was established Rep. E. Carroll Reece R-Tenn. called it "an example of the danger that a great foundation may use its public trust funds for political purposes." News commentator Fulton Lewis Jr. called it "an ill-disguised slush fund... dedicated to the fighting of any or all attempts to ferret out Communist intrigues and espionage agents." Hutchins denied or shrugged off all such accusations.

For the first five years of its existence the fund's activities were devoted to preserving civil rights, among them the right to oppose the tactics, eventually censured by the Senate, of Senator McCarthy.

Of this era Hutchins says, "The pinko charges against the fund were a function of the time and hopefully that time is past. There is a large segment of the Birch Society in Santa Barbara, but the Birch Society has never taken out after us. I suppose, because the center never takes sides on any issue, although the members of the staff feel free to say anything they wish."

"Feel Free" is a guiding motto at the center, and an embroidered sampler memorializing this advice hangs over the fireplace in Hutchins' office. What the staff feels free to do mostly is talk on virtually any subject from the condition of the American Negro to the chemistry of schizophrenia. In recent years, however, the trend, guided by Hutchins, is socio-political, with emphasis on war and peace.

Philosophical discussion seems appropriate in the setting: a Grecian pillared quadrangular structure framing an open atrium, complete with fountain and marble walks. It once was the main residence of a 40-acre wooded hilltop estate established at the turn of the century by shirt manufacturer Frederick Forster. After the death of his widow in 1935 the fund bought the property for $250,000 and spent another $400,000 remodeling the rooms into offices for the center.

So far 15,000 tapes of conversation and seven million pamphlets covering 175 subjects have been distributed at cost, mostly to students and teachers and to nonprofit radio stations sponsored by the Pacifica Foundation. This foundation is headed by Paul Hoffman's son Hallock, secretary-treasurer of the fund and a member of the center staff.

PUBLICATIONS QUOTA

Hutchins says about one-fourth of the center's $1.2 million annual budget goes into the publications program. The rest pays staff salaries, which he says are comparable to those of full professors at large universities, and the expenses of bringing some 300 temporary consultants to the center each year for visits that may last from days to weeks.

These consultants have included foreign diplomats, U. S. labor leaders, politicians, scientists, historians and philosophers. Their views frequently wind up in center publications.

Santa Barbara's healthy, pleasant climate lures many of the nation's elite to its emerald hills and sapphire shores, and from them the center draws both moral and financial support. Some are founding members, some only occasional contributors, and some ignore the center.

Its lack of practical achievement seems to bother no one, least of all the center's staff.

Vice President Frank Kelly, a former newspaperman and speech writer for President Truman states the center's function in this way: "The center has assembled a group of widely experienced persons who are trying to examine the terrible problems of our time as thinking citizens, aware that democracy is endangered by stereotypes and slogans as it is by technology and totalitarianism.

"A thousand educational institutions have groups using our tapes for the frank and free discussions that citizens must have if democracy is to survive. I believe that there are basically two types of government: Government by dictation and government by discussion. The center is dedicated to discussion, and we believe that ongoing discussions are vital."

When asked "what has the center done?" both Hutchins and Kelly protest: "Nobody ever asked whether Harvard accomplished anything." Despite this deprecation, the record shows the center has at least had a part in several achievements. A center booklet called "Cybernation: The Silent Conquest" is credited with leading to appointment of a presidential committee to study the effects of automation. The committee's recommendation: A guaranteed annual wage, long supported by the center.

A center study of the living conditions of the American Indian led to reforms in government handling of reservation redmen. A center publication, "Religion and the Democratic Society," became the basis of a program used by the Council of Christians and Jews.

The current war on poverty stemmed in part from the publication, "The Other America," which attracted the attention of President John F. Kennedy.

CHAIN OF RESPONSIBILITY

Who picks the center's projects? Hutchins, ostensibly, but he in turn is responsible to the center's 450 founding members, each of whom contributes $1,000 or more a year, and to the board of directors of the Fund for the Republic, which tops the center's three-level organization.

Heading the board are Paul Hoffman, honorary chairman; Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas, chairman; and J. R. Parten, a Houston oil man, vice chairman.

Many at the center are professional intellectuals — men who have made a profitable career of expounding ideas which find support among moneyed but less articulate philanthropists. Frequently, however, the center provides a platform for the philanthropists themselves.

Chinese Take Happy View Of Funerals

By MERVYN PEREIRA

SINGAPORE (AP) — Death for most Singaporeans is a particular affair conducted in a holiday atmosphere.

Almost 80 per cent of Singapore's residents are Chinese, and for the traditional Chinese death is merely a sendoff — the deceased is off to join his ancestors and with them look down and heap blessings on future generations.

The thrifty, hardworking Chinese spend most of their lives trying to accumulate wealth for their children — and for their burial. The better a sendoff, it is believed, the more blessings they will be able to bestow.

In order to insure a proper sendoff, children are frequently registered with a "death insurance" program as soon as they are born. These programs operate somewhat like life insurance programs. The size of the monthly payment determines the size of the funeral.

THREE PHASES

Shuffling off this mortal coil for the Chinese involves three phases: pre-death, death and the final sendoff. When someone comes down with what appears to be a fatal illness, he is taken to a death house — first, second or third class, depending on his financial circumstances.

A first-class death house is resplendent with wall-to-wall carpeting, television air conditioning, chanting Buddhist or Confucian prayers and any personal comforts desired. Buoyed up by all this luxury, the ill person sometimes recovers.

But if he does succumb, the family holds a meeting and determines how big a show to put on. A really first-rate funeral must have 100 professional mourners decked out in robes of white.

Also included will be still walkers who are supposed to have personal contact with dead ancestors, elevated as they are five to 10 feet in the air. There must be relatives, but if the family is small these, too, can be hired.

LONG PROCESSION

The funeral itself is a long procession of vehicles and people afoot. It is led by a Chinese band, with gongs, riding on a flat-bed truck. Right behind is the subject of all this attention, encased in a wooden coffin shaped like a boat so he can sail to his ancestors without difficulty.

The hearse is covered with banners and flowers and topped with a dome and pointed spire. Paper houses, money, cars, electrical gadgets and other household items are brought along and burned at graveside. Tradition has it that these turn into the real thing in the hereafter. Somewhere in the procession is a Western-style band playing the same tunes it does at dances.

But the festivities really begin as soon as the late lamented is brought home from the death house. Hundreds of tables and chairs are rented and groan under loads of suckling pig, brandy, snails in soup, beer, sweet and sour pork, and more brandy and beer.

Between mouthfuls, the guests tell each other what a great person was the deceased and how lucky he was to have such a wonderful family to send him away in such style. This funeral is compared with other ones recently attended.

Some tables are set aside for mah jong which is played endlessly — and for money — by those at the wake. It is not unknown for a skillful family of mah jong players to win back the expenses of the funeral.

During the feasting and mah jong playing, the professional mourners gather around the bier and mourn — in low, wailing tones so as not to disturb anyone. There are two days of this, and then comes the funeral, usually through the busiest streets on the way to the cemetery.

At the burial ground a gold-fish is freed in a special stream. If it swims upstream — following its normal instincts, all is well. However, if it goes the other way the incident is not mentioned and often the deceased's home is sold.

When the center of attention is finally planted there is a thunderous clash of gongs to frighten away evil spirits. To make doubly sure none is lurking about, strings of firecrackers are also fired off. Then everybody breaks up and heads for home — until the next funeral.

Flashing Lights Used In Treating Ailment

Some people are sent into epileptic seizures by flashing lights and 'Stardust,' but now there is hope for victims of this rare ailment. Dr. Francis M. Forster uses computers and electronic equipment in his treatment at the University of Wisconsin. The results may help in other types of epilepsy.

By DEAN MEADERS
Associated Press Writer

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — As the young girl stared upward from her bed into the darkened room, the soft white light began flashing steadily down, gradually speeding up until it flickered 15 times a second.

Abruptly, she began stirring and trembling in an epileptic seizure. The white light stopped and she lay quiet again. Doctors watched a maze of electronic equipment record her body's violent reaction to the blinking light.

The girl, 13, suffers from photosensitive epilepsy—one of the rarest of all types of the ailment. Rapid bursts of light throw her into spasms.

For 60 hours, the girl lay beneath the flashing light, slowly being freed from the seizures before leaving the University of Wisconsin's Neurological Center for her home in Dallas, Tex. Doctors do not completely understand why light causes her brain to spark the uncontrollable floods of energy in her body, but Wisconsin's Dr. Francis M. Forster has found a way to minimize it.

SOLUTION SIMPLE

His solution is as simple as it is effective. The patient is subjected to the light over and over until he becomes immune to it as a trigger for the seizures. He is taught subconsciously to ignore the light.

Forster's first patients four years ago required 300 hours of treatment. Aided by a computer, the girl took only the 60, "and I think we can do better than that," he says.

Forster, 55, is a graying neurologist with a national reputation. He was on the team of doctors who treated Dwight D. Eisenhower after his heart attack while President. He also testified as an expert in the trial of Jack Ruby for the murder of Lee Harvey Oswald.

PIONEERED RESEARCH

Forster pioneered epilepsy research on seizures caused by music and worked 10 months with one patient who reacted violently to the strains of "Stardust." After listening to the melody 6,000 times under Forster's careful observation, the patient returned to his regular routine without fear of the frequent spasms. The photosensitive variety is more difficult to pinpoint. A surprising number of everyday occurrences can be explosive to a sufferer.

Walking by a picket fence, watching a flickering television screen, gazing through the slowly turning blades of an electric fan, or driving down a street with the sun shining in streaks through the trees can suddenly ignite a seizure.

It wasn't until 1930 that American researchers seriously studied the perplexing disease. It was 1963 before Forster and his staff of four physicians, two technicians, and one psychologist began their work.

Most of Forster's patients are bothered by a wide range of light frequencies—blinks of 15 to 30 per second is average, and here is where the computer aids the delicate procedure.

As the light quickens, eight functions of the patient's body are recorded by instruments and fed by a special telephone hookup to a computer located five miles from the hospital.

The computer examines the incoming data 1,000 times every second, searching for certain patterns in the brain waves. When a pattern is detected, the computer signals the necessary change in the light level.

Although Forster can manually control the lights if necessary, he says the computer "just saves us a lot of time."

During the long sessions with the light, the patient is also exposed to a clicking noise that later will provide the key to a successful remedy. They are conditioned, through repeated ordeals, not to respond to the dangerous light when they hear the clicking.

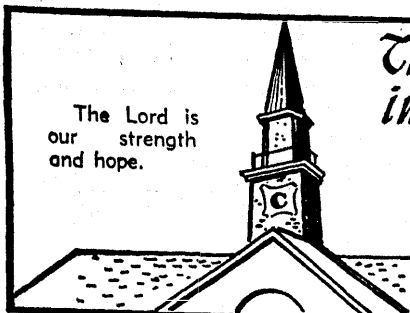

SPECIAL GLASSES

When the patient leaves Forster's care, he will wear special eyeglasses equipped with a photo-electric cell that triggers the same clicking noise when a dangerous light level is reached. The brain hears the clicking and reminds the body to remain calm. With the bulky glasses, the 13-year-old girl suffered only nine seizures in six weeks. She previously had 40 each day.

A tall, soft-spoken man who smiles continually, Dr. Forster hesitates to predict his work will eventually aid all epilepsy sufferers.

"We've just broadened the treatment possibilities for certain persons who don't respond to other kinds of medication," he says.

His work has, however, suggested other avenues to follow in the treatment of various types of epilepsy which affect an estimated 2 million Americans. Forster now believes that certain primed patterns, such as wild black and white checks and stripes, may also spur seizures. They will be his next target.

Big Turnout Expected At Church Event

Several hundred out-of-towners are expected to converge on Bastrop today for the "dinner-on-the-grounds" homecoming planned there by the First Baptist Church congregation.

The 1973 - member congregation will be observing its 10th anniversary in the present facilities on East Madison Avenue.

Ray Rust, pastor. Guest pulpits will be the Rev. Earl C. Whitsitt of Memphis, Tenn. He is now retired, but was pastor of the church for 10 years, 1946-56.

Reich Reds In Struggle With Religious Groups

BERLIN (AP) — The East German Communist regime remains locked in a struggle with religion that lies largely beneath the surface but sometimes shoots off sparks like a smoldering volcano.

Officially, the regime allows religious worship. But it will not allow large numbers of West Germans to come to East Germany for the October celebration of the 450th anniversary of the Protestant Reformation in Wittenberg.

Martin Luther lies buried in the Wittenberg Castle church where he posted the 95 theses that launched the Reformation. His heritage is one of the things that Germans East and West have in common.

Some 80 per cent of East Germany's population of 17 million are Protestants, mostly Lutheran. About 10 per cent of the population is Roman Catholic.

In East Germany the Protestant church carries the major burden of opposing the official atheism of the state. Elsewhere in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union, the Roman or Orthodox Churches bear the brunt of Communist repression.

A major problem facing both the Protestant and Catholic faiths is getting government permission to build churches and the money and the materials to build them with. Many churches are still in ruins from the war, although some of general historical or architectural value have been rebuilt. For the Protestants, money is less of a problem since each church member pays an annual tax, one per cent of his income to the church. This is traditional in Germany.

Because of its smallness, the Roman Catholic Church faces less open opposition from the government than do the Protestants. An aide to Alfred Cardinal Bengsch said in East Berlin recently: "We make ourselves no illusions. One of the reasons we are left alone as much as we are is because we are so few."

Bengsch himself is one of the few direct ties between East and West Berlin. Residing in East Berlin, he is allowed to go to West Berlin three days a month to minister to the 250,000 Catholics there. At 45 the youngest cardinal in the church, Bengsch became Berlin's bishop only days after the Communists had built the wall dividing the city and his diocese, on Aug. 13, 1961.

TRY TO CAPTURE Both sides in the church-state battle try to capture the minds of the young. The Communists have instituted the Jugendweiche, a ceremony in which a boy or a girl of 14 swears allegiance to the state on the basis of atheist and Marxist principles.

Protestant opposition to the state ceremony can vary from parish to parish. Said one East Berlin man, for example: "We have a new and young (Protestant) pastor. Although the church is willing to bend a little, he is not. He says, 'If you go to the Jugendweiche, don't come back here.' He has plunged the whole parish into a crisis."

The Catholic Church goes easy on actual punishment for those who attend U. S. state ceremony. There was a time when it was said that if a child did not go to the Jugendweiche, his career was as good as over. In some places this apparently is still true. But in manpower-short East Germany, the regime, too, has learned to bend a little.

Said a parish priest: "We try to get our children to religious instruction when they start school. If we succeed, they generally will skip the Jugendweiche. If we don't, maybe 50 per cent of more will go to the state ceremony."

"We also make every effort to see that our children school-ically are near the top of their class. This puts the state in the position of having to reject a good student and potentially valuable contributor to the society as a whole. We have found that, faced with this decision, the way the Rev. Robert McAfee Brown of Stanford University describes the modern change in Protestant - Roman Catholic relations in a new Doubleday book, 'The Ecumenical Revolution.'"

CRITICAL AGE The age of 14 is critical because it is then that school authorities decide if a child is to go on in school or should learn a trade. This also is traditional for all of Germany.

Catholic tutoring to help give their children an edge is but one of the many subtle expressions of underground warfare. Another is preaching.

Priests emphasize theology talk in their sermons because it is possible for them to draw on scripture and parable to express a point running counter to the regime.

"The Communists," one priest declared, "are often so bound up on their own dialectics that they do not realize what is being said. If you know your church, however, you will know what we are talking about. It is a trick we first learned under the Nazis."

The courage of convictions has stood the church in good stead in East Germany under the Nazis for 12 years and now for 22 years under communism.

Daily Formula For Confident Living

Know Your Strong Points

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE
"Know your weaknesses" is often advanced as a rule of success. It is sound advice. But is even more important to know your strengths.

A businessman told of a man in his employ whose personality weaknesses were "messing up the whole production department." Tacit suggestions brought no improvement, nor did plain spoken criticism of poor results. He seemed to have a very unconsciousness whatsoever of his shortcomings.

The employer was tempted more than once to let the fellow go. But instead he kept trying to think of ways to help him and at the same time benefit the business. Would it do, he thought, to call him in and say, "Now, Frank, I'm going to give it to you straight." and bluntly tell him of his many weaknesses? No, that might antagonize the man completely or, worse yet, demoralize him. After much thinking the employer got an idea. He drew up a questionnaire, listing typical weaknesses and strengths of personality that limit or enhance effectiveness on the job. He passed this questionnaire to everyone in the organization requesting each to check weaknesses and strengths and return the signed questionnaire in a sealed envelope. He promised to keep the information confidential — the sole purpose being to help each person by self-evaluation.

LAST ONE RETURNED
The last man to return his questionnaire was Frank. He delivered it personally; laid it on the boss's desk and said, "I have analyzed myself with the help of this questionnaire. Checked off my strengths and weaknesses like you asked. Never realized I have so many weaknesses. Frankly, if I headed this company I would fire a man with that many weaknesses. Maybe you just better let me go. I wouldn't blame you."

The employer took a blank piece of paper and placed it over the weaknesses checked on the questionnaire. "What's that you're saying, Frank? I'm not looking at your weaknesses right now. What I'm looking at are your strengths. Did you realize you have this many strengths? I know you had some of them in you. And there are others here I didn't know you have. You have a lot of potentiality, Frank. Let's both of us think this over for a few days, and then let's consider which of your strengths we should especially develop in this company."

When they met again the boss announced, "Frank, it comes to me that we should take you out of the production department. I'm going to put you in sales."

"Why, that's the last thing I think I'd be good at!" exclaimed Frank.

"That's because you've been moping along in your weaknesses instead of living on your strengths. I see in you a terrific salesman."

The astonished man shrank from the idea. He was very dubious. But finally he agreed to try it.

SUCCESSFUL SALESMAN
Today he is one of the company's most successful salesmen. "He is now a great producer," says his boss, "because he is living and working not on his weaknesses but on his strengths."

How about you and me? Are we living on our strengths? I wonder. To be a truly successful person one must be conscious of one's main strength, and activate, develop and use them. This takes effort. But you must rise to the challenge; that is, if you want to get anywhere. Beware of going off on a tangent, of trying to copy someone else, or trying to broaden your base too much. Avoid these failure patterns. Stick to your main strengths.

The factors that brought the big change in Frank's career will work for others too. The process involved three phases: analysis, belief and action.

ANALYZE YOURSELF. Be clear about your weaknesses, but also more aware of your strong points. "Know thyself," said the ancient Greeks.

BELIEVE IN YOURSELF. Have enough belief in yourself to make objectives commensurate with your strengths. Picture goals as accomplished — then get going to achieve them. "Self-trust is the first secret of success," said Ralph Waldo Emerson.

GO INTO ACTION. With self-knowledge and self-belief you are equipped for success, but these qualities will never become operative until you act on them. Anything you ever do has its risks and drawbacks. It is futile to wait for foolproof circumstances or the perfect course of action. These do not exist. "Nothing will ever be attempted," said Dr. Samuel Johnson, "if all possible objections must first be overcome."

So mobilize your self-knowledge and belief and go into action. Discover for yourself what life can be when you are living on your strengths, not on your weaknesses.

Church Wealth Gains Business Policy Role

(EDITOR'S NOTE: American business is more and more aware of the role church wealth can play — and is playing — in corporate policies as they affect national life. The churches themselves are unsure just how, or even if, such influence should be exerted. This special report is in detail on the situation.)

By ROBERT J. REGAN
NEW YORK (UPI)—Should the church swing the weight of its heavy pocketbook to back its ideas on social problems of the day? The question is a lively one in the United States today—in the councils of churches themselves and in the nation's financial community.

American church leaders are growing less and less reluctant to show the heft of their money holdings in taking a stand on problems of modern society ranging from minority rights to war.

This does not mean that church leaders are preparing to step down from the pulpit as a group to lock horns with corporate management over every ethical dispute that arises.

But events of recent months have top-level corporate executives—already well seasoned in combat with government, labor, and dissident stockholders—looking somewhat anxiously over their shoulders for signs of challenge from a new, powerful, influential quarter.

Consider a few recent harbingers: —The Community Church of New York unloads its stock holding—with considerable public fanfare—in a large chemical company because it makes napalm for Vietnam.

A powerful group of churches brandishes multimillion-dollar deposits in 40 banks that lend money to South Africa to get them to "use their influence" in fighting apartheid.

The Roman Catholic Archdiocese in St. Louis queries 930 firms, with which it does millions of dollars worth of business, on hiring Negroes. Then it rates them in a "buyer's guide" for its parishes according to the answers.

Methodists and Presbyterians use their stock in a large film and camera company as admission tickets to the annual stockholders' meeting to speak against the company's employment practices with regard to minorities.

The contrast is sharp with an earlier posture of many church leaders who, in disagreement with management on some ethical matter, would quietly dispose of their holdings and put their money somewhere else without making a public show of the matter.

With the new willingness of churches to flex their economic muscles, the question arises: How much sinew is there in the ecclesiastical bank account, how big a share in American business have churches accumulated, how much weight do they swing in the marketplace through their huge expenditures?

Even an estimated figure to begin with, is nearly impossible. Not all the churches are willing to make any of that information available—they are not obliged to—and most of what financial detail is provided comes out piecemeal and limited to particular parts of the various churches.

But churches traditionally have been big spenders. They have been big contributors to the nation's economic life. They have been big players in the marketplace.

Two ministers will serve as evangelists at a revival scheduled at Eros Baptist Church. It was announced by the Rev. Allen Blackman, pastor.

The Rev. Virgil Jones, pastor of Grayson Baptist Church, will serve as evangelist Monday through Thursday. The Rev. Douglas Chapman, a native of Chatham and student at New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary, will be evangelist from Friday through Sunday, August 27.

Services will be held nightly at 7:30. Sunday morning services will be at 11. There will be a homecoming observance Sunday, August 27. Following the morning services there will be a dinner at nearby Fox Camp. After dinner there will be singing services at the church.

Rev. C. Arnold To Conclude Revival Series
Services at 7:30 p.m. today at Lamar Baptist Church south of Delhi, will conclude a week of revival services, with the Rev. Charlie Arnold serving as evangelist.

The Rev. Mr. Arnold spent his early years in Franklin Parish, and formerly served as pastor of Warsaw Baptist Church near Crowley, and the Holly Ridge Baptist Church near Wisner. He presently is pastor of Englewood Baptist Church, Jackson, Tenn.

Earl Stroud is in charge of music for the revival. The Rev. Earl Williams is pastor of the church.

have preferred real property rather than securities for investment. One popular deal is the "lease-back," in which a (tax free) religious body buys property and leases it back to the previous owner. The Knights of Columbus own the land under Yankee Stadium. The Mormon church owns and operates hotels, stores, and factories in Utah.

The Wall Street Journal in May calculated the market value of stock investments of the United Church of Christ at $175 million. It has 2 million members and is close to the median in financial status.

Extrapolating to what the expert called "a highly dubious degree," this figures out to nearly $90 a church member.

Applying that to the total membership of all U.S. religious bodies, 125 million persons, one would get $11 billion total stock and bonds holdings.

Emphasizing that a guess at total wealth would lump a great variety of bodies—not just churches but also annuity funds, revolving loan funds, endowments that finance hospitals and schools and those that are the sole support of many orders —this source concluded:

"If you insist on a ballpark figure, counting real property, securities, and other investments of all U.S. religious bodies—I'd plump for $100 billion."

first time since last September, but it doesn't mean a thing. Little Theatre enthusiasts are working like crazy from their homes trying to make mole-

Membership chairman, Mrs. L. H. Carter, has her workers primed to accept new members. She should current members fail to renew by September 1, so — watch it!

Just to satisfy my own curiosity I sought out the old programs and counted the number of people who actively participated in the six productions of the last September. It was enlightening to learn that 140 individuals, ranging in age from 10 years to those who won't divulge their secret,

Many of these 140 appeared or helped backstage in more than one play, but their names were counted only once. This figure does not include the board members, the number of unused volunteers who manned the box office, ushered or acted as hostesses, or any paid employee; nor does it include the scores of young people who participated in the seven children's theatre productions presented during the past year. Surely a facility which consistently provides hundreds of our friends and neighbors of all ages with the opportunity to satisfy their desire to create and to serve their community — as well as to entertain thousands more — is worthy of our continued support. Saint Victory Makes NFL History

Cuozzo Directs 3 Scoring Drives

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — The surprising Saints from New Orleans re-wrote National Football League history here Saturday night as rookie Charles Durkee's fieldgoal gave the expansion team a 20-17 victory over the Pittsburgh Steelers.

It was the second straight triumph for the Saints and marked the first time in league history that an expansion team has won two pre-season contests. Quarterback Gary Cuozzo started the second half and directed the Saints to three scoring drives. They were behind 10-7 at intermission. It was the first success as a Saint in three games for Cuozzo, who was Johnny Unitas' understudy four years at Baltimore until New Orleans gave up its No. 1 draft choice to get him. Cuozzo came into the game seconds before the first half ended replacing scrambling Gary Wood, who injured his ankle when he was rushed passing. Cuozzo unleashed a 57-yard scoring pass to Walter "the

Oliver Paces Dodger Romp Over Atlanta

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Nate Oliver slammed three six-run, one of them triggering a six-run outburst in the third inning, Saturday as the Los Angeles Dodgers defeated Atlanta 7-3.

The Dodgers' biggest inning of the season helped left hander Claude Osterman gain his 14th victory against 12 defeats. The Braves gathered 10 hits, one of them a two-run homer by Henry Aaron. It was Aaron's 31st.

Willie Davis and Lou Johnson each singled home a run for the Dodgers, who pounded loser Pat Jarvis, 13-6, and three successors for 10 hits.

Two walks and in infield hit by Osterman loaded the bases, setting up the six-run third inning. Oliver singled home the first two runs and Davis singled home another driving Jarvis to cover. Johnson greeted reliever Clay Carroll with a run-scoring single. An error and a wild pitch let in the last two runs of the rally.

Osterman has beaten the Braves five straight times since losing to Singles by Cleve Boyer and Orlando Martinez set up a run-scoring fly in the fourth inning by Atlanta's Woody Woodward. Felipe Alou was aboard with a single when Aaron clouted his fifth-inning homer.

Flea" Roberts early in the third quarter as the Saints forged in front 14-10.

Cuozzo's bomb came on the fourth play of the third quarter. Roberts was just a step ahead of Steeler Bob Hohn when he caught the pass on the 17, but he drew away from Hohn as he darted toward the end zone.

Cuozzo had been largely ineffectual in the Saints' first two games with Wood and Bill Kolmer, who did not play against the Steelers, carrying most of the load. Durkee's 37-yard field goal, with 4:48 left in the game came after fleet Jimmy Butler had raced 75 yards for a Steeler touchdown over right tackle. It made the score 17-10. Butler rushed for a total of 140 yards.

The Saints are now 2-1 for the exhibition season. They beat the St. Louis Cardinals a week ago and lost their opener to the Rams. Pittsburgh is 0-2, losing to New Orleans and Green Bay. Earlier in the fourth period, Durkee had booted a 41-yard field goal. The 165-pound kicker, an ex-Oklahoma State player, was signed as a free agent after impressing Saints' coach Tom Fears at a tryout camp earlier in the summer. The Dallas Cowboys looked at Durkee, who has now kicked five field goals and five extra points for New Orleans.

Pittsburgh got on the score board quickly in the first quarter.

Players Blast Owner Finley Over Incident

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Kansas City Athletics players said Saturday that the suspension of pitcher Lew Krause resulted from an incident that "was blown out of proportion." Charles O. Finley, Athletics owner, announced Friday he was suspending Krause without pay, and that there would be no alcoholic drinks served on commercial airlines to the players the rest of the season.

Finley said he "will no longer tolerate the shenanigans of a very few individuals." Jack Aker, player representative, said the following statement was unanimously approved by the players in a clubhouse meeting Saturday: "In response to Charles O. Finley's statement of August 18, we, the players of the Kansas City Athletics, feel that an unjust amount of pressure has been brought to bear on several members of the club who had no part whatsoever in the so-called incident on a recent plane trip from Boston to Kansas City."

The overwhelming opinion of the players is that the entire matter was blown out of proportion. Mr. Finley's policy of using certain unauthorized personnel in his organization as go-betweens has led to similar misunderstandings in the past and has tended to undermine the morale of the ball club. We players feel that if Mr. Finley would give his fine coaching staff and excellent manager the authority they deserve these problems would not exist. "This statement explains itself," Aker said.

Krause had said earlier in Kansas City that Finley "was a completely justified in issuing his suspension."

Neither Krause nor Finley would discuss the nature of the incident on the Aug. 2 plane trip. Krause, 24, received a $125,000 bonus several years ago to sign. He was the club's top hurler last year with a 14-9 record. This season he is 6-14. "I hope he will lift the suspension at the earliest possible moment," Krause said. "In the meantime, I am keeping myself in shape as I know I can be of help to the team."

Records Fall In Five Events In Greatest Day In Swimming

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Five world records in five events were set Saturday in the women's outdoor national AAU swimming and diving championships, a feat described by a veteran AAU executive as the greatest day in the history of American swimming.

After Claudia Kolb, Toni Hewitt, Pam Kruse, Cattie Ball and the Santa Clara, Calif. Swim Club 400 meter freestyle relay team left world records sinking in their wake, Harry Hainsworth, director of aquatics for the AAU, said, "this is the biggest day in the history of swimming in America."

The Santa Clara relay team capped the record smashing day with a 4:03.5 in the 400 meter freestyle, bettering the mark of 4:03.8 established by the U.S. Olympic team in Tokyo in 1964. Linda Gustavson, Nancy Ryan, Laura Fritz and Pokey Watson carried the Santa Clara team to a victory over Vesper B.C. of Philadelphia, which finished in 4:05.7.

Miss Hewitt, 15-year-old who never finished better than fourth in a national title event, started the run of world records in the 200-meter butterfly as she won in 2:23 by a touch over Elie Daniel of the Vesper B.C. Philadelphia, whose 2:23.9 also shattered the existing mark.

The record is held by Holland's Ada Kok at 2:25.3, and the European swimmer also has pending mark of 2:25.5 set a few weeks.

Miss Kruse, who last month won the Pan American Games 200-yard freestyle, churned through Kelly pool Saturday in 2:09.7, bettering the world mark of 2:10.5 held by Pokey Watson of the Santa Clara, Calif. Swim Club, the defending champion who finished fifth in the 200.

Linda Gustavson of the Santa Clara S. C. was second to Miss Kruse with a 2:10.3, also bettering the world mark. The third world mark in three races was broken moments later when Miss Ball, a 15-year-old blonde, swam away from field of eight to win the 100 meter breaststroke in 1:14.6.

The old record of 1:15.7 was held by Galina Prozumenshikova of Russia at Lenin Central, July 17, 1966, and equaled by Miss Ball in December 1966 at Santa Clara.

World records fell like autumn leaves at the women's National AAU Outdoor Swimming and Diving Championships Saturday as Claudia Kolb, Toni Hewitt, Pam Kruse, and Cattie Ball, a quartet of high school girls, wrote new marks in the international book.

Miss Kolb, a 17-year-old senior at Santa Clara, Calif., High School broke the fourth world mark of the day and her second in two days, as she won the 400 meter individual medley in 5:08.2, shattering the existing standard of 5:14.9, and her own pending 5:09.7 set last month in the Pan American Games.

In lowering the existing mark held by Donna De Varona of Santa Clara, since 1964, Miss Kolb won by 10 yards over Sue Pederson of Sacramento, Calif. Miss Hewitt, a 15-year-old junior at Corona Del Mar High School in California, Miss Kruse of the Ft. Lauderdale swimming association, and Miss Ball of Jacksonville, Fla., set their records in the first three events Saturday. Lt. Mickey King, pert blonde Air Force officer from Ann Arbor, Mich., lost her bid for a

Cards Keep Streak Alive, Top Astros

HOUSTON (AP) — Curt Flood lined four singles, scored three runs and drove in another as the streaking St. Louis Cardinals rapped Houston 7-4 Saturday.

It was the eighth straight victory for the first place Cardinals and the 13th loss in the last 15 games for the Astros.

Sacrifice flies by Roger Maris and Tim McCraw produced a pair of Cardinals runs in the first after Lou Brock and Flood had opened the game with singles.

Flood's second hit touched off another two-run flurry for St. Louis in the third with Orlando Cepeda, who had three hits, doubling one of the runs across.

Flood singled again in the seventh and rode home on McCraw's hit. In the eighth, Flood singled Dal Maxvill across with another run.

'Official' Stamp Due

With Paul Martin

Official notice that Dr. Leslie Glasgow has been reappointed director of the Louisiana Wild Life and Fisheries Commission is expected to break at any time, possibly during the meeting of the commission Tuesday morning at its offices in New Orleans.

It is understood Gov. John McKeithen has asked Dr. Glasgow to continue — for which Louisiana's sportsmen have a hearty "Hurrah" — and the LSU board of supervisors has been requested to extend the leave of absence granted the LSU Wildlife professor last August so he could take command of steering the Louisiana outdoor programs.

"Speaking for myself and the Louisiana Wildlife Federation, we hope that for the good of conservation Dr. Glasgow can be retained," declared Wyatt Jackson, Shreveport, president of the federation. "The support of Dr. Glasgow by the organized and independent sportsmen of the state... makes it mandatory that his services be retained for as long as possible."

"I can think of no more opportune time to thank and congratulate all of you," Jackson continued in a message to federation members. "Your splendid support and commendable actions for the good of conservation during our latest 'brush fire,' namely, the attempt to take away the power to hire and fire employees of the LWF-FC by the director."

"By your many letters, telegrams, phone calls, letters to the editor, contact with your senators and representatives, and by your personal presence at the last meeting of the commission, you have shown that the sportsmen of Louisiana are vitally interested in a good, sound conservation program of our fish and game."

"Further, I believe that if there had been any doubt in anyone's mind that Dr. Glasgow had the support of the sportsmen of this state as to his ability to carry out a good conservation program, that doubt has been dispelled."

It's last call for fishermen who have not qualified an entry for the Ouachita Wildlife Unit's summer contest which comes to a close with any catches registered today. Contest chairman Jim Packer will be busy this week sorting the entries to determine winners for this month, plus winners of the grand prizes for the summer event. Rewards will be presented at the meeting next week.

Last call is also out for waterfowl hunters expecting to participate in the special hunt of Sept. 22-30. CHICAGO (AP) — Ed O'Bradovich, 255-pound defensive end, changed his mind about quitting pro football Saturday and came to terms with the Chicago Bears of the National Football League.

O'Bradovich, 27, starting his sixth Bear season, was fined $100 a day since refusing to join the club at the start of summer practice.

The total fine of $2,600 will be turned over to the Chicago Community Fund, George Halas, Jr., Bear President, said in announcing O'Bradovich would join the club immediately.

"O'Bradovich phoned Thursday to set up a meeting Saturday morning. He will be added help for a potentially great bear defense," Halas said.

LSU Banquet Set Tuesday

Response to Tuesday's north-east Louisiana LSU sports banquet by alumni and friends of Louisiana State University is proving to be "very enthusiastic," according to Kent Anderson, president of the Ouachita Parish LSU Alumni Association, sponsors of the event.

"Several hundred LSU alumni and friends already have purchased tickets or have indicated their intention to attend, leading us to believe that it will be the finest affair of its type for LSU to be held in this area in years," Anderson said.

The banquet is scheduled for Tuesday at 8 p.m. at the Paragon Club in Monroe. Featured speakers on the program will include Tiger head football coach Charles McClendon and Dr. Edsel E. (Ted) Thrash, director of LSU alumni affairs.

Anderson urged all interested persons in northeast Louisiana to buy their banquet tickets in advance, but said that a few tickets will also be available at the door the evening of the banquet.

Tickets can be obtained by contacting Mrs. Helen Bird, P.O. Box 488, West Monroe, La. 71291; Mrs. Aileen Gatlin, Kellogg-Moore Oil Company, Ben Marshall, Ouachita National Bank; Webb Nix, American Bank; Eric Wade, Central Bank, all in Monroe; and J. W. Robertson, 1st National Bank of West

Nye, Banks Shut Lid On Phillies, 6-1

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Rich Nye stopped Philadelphia on five hits and Ernie Banks' two-run single kept a three-run Chicago ninth inning as the Cubs beat the Phillies 6-1 Saturday.

Nye, 10-9, allowed the only Philadelphia run in the fifth when Gary Sutherland hit his first major league homer.

The Cubs were leading 3-1 in the ninth, though they had managed only five hits off Jim Bunning, 13-10. But they roughed up reliever John Boomer for four singles and three runs, with Glenn Beckert driving in one and Banks knocking in two.

Ron Santo hit his 27th homer in the second inning, the first off Phillips' pitching in 77 innings, and the Cubs scored two unearned runs with two out in the fifth.

Clutch Stops Agostini

DUNDROD, Northern Ireland (AP) — A balky clutch stopped Italian motorcycle ace Giacomo Agostini from clinching the 1967 500 c.c. world title Saturday.

Agostini's three-cylinder MV Agusta was left at the start of the 500 c.c. race in the Ulster Grand Prix series.

His rival, Mike Hailwood of Britain, won on his Japanese Honda at an average speed of 102.88 miles an hour and narrowed the gap in the world title chase.

Israel Clears Several Arab Refugees To Return

AMMAN Jordan (AP) — Red Cross officials report Israel has cleared 2,088 Arab refugees for return from Jordan Sunday to their homes in Israeli-occupied territory west of the Jordan River.

Jordan and Israel exchanged charges of inefficiency after only 255 refugees had not home Friday on the first day of the repatriation program. The program was suspended Saturday because of the Jewish Sabbath.

More than 170,000 have applied to return from Jordan to the homes and camps they fled during and after the June 5-6 war.

Jordan has asked Israel to give priority to refugees living in temporary desert camps. However, the secretary of the Jordanian government's refugee committee, Col. Abdullah Rafid, said only 37 of 680 families given permission to return Sunday were from the camps. He said the rest were living in more comfortable conditions with friends in Amman and other towns.

Israel has set Aug. 31 as a deadline for all refugees to return. Swiss officials of the International Red Cross estimate that, even at Sunday's rate of return, it would take until the end of October to get all the displaced persons back across the cease-fire line. The Red Cross has asked that the deadline be extended.

To forestall Israeli charges that Jordan was inciting the refugees to foment trouble once they got back to Israeli-held territory, Radio Amman has toned down its broadcasts.

But it relayed a manifesto Saturday from a women's organization at Ramallah protesting the Israeli occupation. This denounced arrests, the searching of houses, alleged looting by Israeli troops and the destruction of homes in western Jordan.

In Moslem Sabbath sermons in the mosques Friday, Jordan's religious leaders also spoke in milder fashion than in the past in calling for the return of Jerusalem to Jordan and denouncing the Jewish occupation. The tone of the sermons indicated the religious leaders had been ordered not to deliver inflammatory speeches.

In New York, U.N. Secretary-General U Thant said the immediate minimum needs of about 223,000 Arabs displaced by the war were being met and U.N. Palestine refugee services were approximately back to normal.

FLOOR PLANS: Large foyer sets keynote of first-floor planning. Second floor has five bedrooms, one of which can be used as a portion of a master suite if not required for sleeping quarters. Note unusual number of closets in rooms and halls.

House For Large Family Designed For Modest Lot

By ANDY LANG

This is a house for a large family. It provides up to six bedrooms in an arrangement with ample flexibility over a period of changing requirements. Yet it has fairly modest over-all dimensions—60' by 47', which include a two-car garage.

Putting that much house within those boundaries is possible when there are two stories. And in this particular two-story house, architect Herman H. York has done a good job of designing a really livable home. Note, for instance, that the living room is 25' long, the family room almost 22' long and the combined kitchen—breakfast room 24' long, insuring spacious living for a family large enough to require anywhere from four to six bedrooms.

Also planned into this house are many seemingly small items which nevertheless provide extra convenience, such as the area leading from the garage into the foyer. There is a clothes closet there, so that anyone coming in from the garage can utilize it before getting into the main part of the house. This closet is in addition to the regular mud closet in the adjacent laundry area and the large closet in the foyer near the front entrance door.

ISLAND BARBECUE
The kitchen has an island barbecue, an interesting feature. It also has a built-in oven, freezer space, a pantry, broom closet, planning desk, wood chopping block and large sliding glass doors leading to an outdoor dining terrace. These doors are in the area where a large breakfast table could be located, giving a full view of the outside.

Down a step from the kitchen, at the left rear of the house, is the family room, with a fireplace and another set of sliding glass doors to a second terrace, reached off from the first. In front of the family room is another room which can be used as a den, bedroom or study. It can be reached either from the foyer or the garage and has a separate bath back to back with a lavatory.

The large living room is directly to the right of the foyer and is part of an L combination with a dining room. Together, the two rooms stretch from the front to the rear of the house.

Upstairs, reached via an open-railed stairway are five rooms. Four are designated on the floor plans as bedrooms. The fifth is referred to as a sitting room, nursery or extra bedroom and is so located that, if not required as a bedroom, could become part of a master suite, with a dressing room and bath between the two rooms. It thus could be furnished with a chaise longue and TV or as a nursery. Each room has its own closet, with a huge walk-in closet between the two. The three other upstairs rooms also have ample closet space, and there are two linen closets in the hall.

TWIN LAVATORIES
The bedroom hall bathroom has twin lavatories, the other has a stall shower as well as a tub. Four of the five rooms on that floor have cross ventilation.

The two-car garage has a full storage wall on one side, in addition to a storage closet at the rear. Its white wood clapboards match those on the upper part of the house, which has a red brick lower-story front. There are double front doors leading into the house. It is suggested that these be painted the same color as the shutters and the trim.

For the purpose of cutting costs, the basement extends only under the main portion of the plan. The family room, den and garage are on slab.

Reflections Time Is Here

By MRS. JOHN TOLAR

This is the "lull" time during the summer when we look back on many exciting adventures, vacations that came earlier, flower beds that have been a blooming picture (now fading). There are still moments to relax in the shade under the tree in the living area of the yard, even plan a late summer trip, last minute vacation before the fall comes forth with all its many activities.

While you relax you may notice the newly mowed lawn. Look carefully at the brownish spots that may appear in the St. Augustine grass, if this is in your yard. Don't take it for granted that this is to be expected this time of year, thinking perhaps that dry weather, or cutting too close caused it. You may be the alert type, watching for the dreaded chinch bug. Be sure that your suspicion is right before applying poison.

Diseases (brown spot) could be the trouble. To make sure apply a test for identification by cutting both ends out of a large can (coffee), hammer one end into the soil below the mat of the grass at a point where the grass is green next to the brown area. Fill the can with water from running hose for about five minutes, refilling it when necessary.

If chinch bugs are in the grass they will flow to the top and float on the water. Adults are one-fifth of an inch long, black with white marks on their backs. They suck the juices from the leaves of the grass, causing spots of brown that start small but eventually extend over a large area. Many types of insecticides are recommended by various manufacturers in liquid or granular form or as a wettable powder. Before applying the liquid type the lawn should be wetted down to help the liquid poison to spread more rapidly into the turf.

MOST VULNERABLE

The hot, sunny areas of the yard are the first to be attacked. Here you are most apt to find the chinch bug. If applying the granular type poison, it is best spread in a lawn spreader to dry lawns. However, read the directions on the label with care to see what the manufacturer recommends. If a wettable poison (50 per cent ddt) is applied the whole area should be thoroughly watered down immediately after application. If you can catch the time just before a rain you are lucky. A good prevention—poison the lawn at intervals, at least twice a year, early spring and early fall. If you've had chinch bug problems is a must to be sure they will not reappear. In attending to this task you will aid the lawn in many ways, not only stop chinch bugs, but you will kill the ants, crickets, earwigs, ticks, mites, chiggers, armyworms, and even the mosquitoes that are certainly a mid-summer nuisance. Remember don't apply the insecticide to only the brown spots, but all over. The bugs have already done their damage there and are most likely eating away in the green areas. The preventive treatment is the best insurance against chinch bug.

I didn't mean to disturb your leisure rest in the yard under the big tree, but really, you'll be glad later on if you attack the lawn pests the minute you see signs unless you did it earlier as a preventive.

GARDEN WEEK

Now, garden clubber, plan that last summer "fling" by making plans or by completing plans to attend Home and Garden Week, the festival for friendship. This is held at L.S.U., Baton Rouge, August 21, through 24. You may come down today and register early at Acadia Hall from 4 until 6 p.m. and 8 a.m. to 12 noon on Monday. If you are late, don't worry, you will have a place to stay (other dorms will be available). Just bring your linens (towels, sheets, pillow and blankets). Registration fee is only $1. Be sure to sign the register at the table in the lobby of the Union Building so the university can get an accurate count of how many attend. There's fun for all—so be sure to come. Home and Garden Week hostess, Mary Ella Calais, promises you "Big Fun Week." Get a carload and come early enough to attend the annual Summer LGCF board meeting at the Colonnade Theater. This is a good beginning. There is good entertainment planned every hour. Mrs. Robert E. Creighton of Chattanooga, Tenn., will be the guest speaker on Monday evening at 7:30 at the L.S.U. Student Union

Household Chores Tips Are Given

By ANDY LANG

QUESTION: How do I clean a garbage can that's otherwise in good condition? It's galvanized. Can it be painted?

ANSWER: Soap, water and a scrubbing brush will do the job. To paint, first prime with zinc dust paint or some other primer made especially for galvanized products. Apply two coats of exterior enamel. If you want to make the can less noticeable, paint it the same color as the part of the house where it ordinarily stands.

QUESTION: In painting wood siding, do the knots have to be treated first?

ANSWER: Yes. Apply a sealer of the type make especially for use on knots. However, any resin spots on or around the knots should first be removed with a paint solvent.

Surplus Buds Lower Quality

By AUDREY H. DAWSON

If you, Mrs. Gardener, want large camellia blooms, be sure to remove the surplus buds as soon as you can distinguish flower buds from vegetative or leaf buds. The flower buds are rounded and vegetative or leaf buds are pointed. By removing the surplus buds the blossoms will be of much better quality. There will be fewer blossoms, but larger and of better quality. It's time now to get your gabbleric acid on hand to treat your camellias for earlier blooms. I have treated one large healthy Pink Debutante plant for the last two years with the acid and have experienced excellent results. Be sure, if you plan to treat one, to select a healthy plant and don't treat too many plants especially if the plant is young and small.

Continue to feed your chrysanthemums with a complete fertilizer as 8-8-8. Chrysanthemums require plenty of water. The ground around them should be thoroughly soaked every week. However, be careful to keep the water off the leaves to keep down disease. For large flower heads, disbud all buds that appear except the center bud of each cluster.

If you have not lifted and replanted your Easter Lily bulbs, do so as soon as possible. See lect the bulbs that are free from insects and diseases.

HOME, GARDEN WEEK
Thirty four homemakers are leaving Tuesday to attend Home and Garden Week on the LSU campus. The group will return Thursday.

TIPS FOR HOMEMAKERS
A good way to store a paint brush is on long nails driven into a rafter. This allows the bristles to dry while hanging down. Another way, after cleaning, open a wire coat hanger and slip one end through a hole in the brush handle, then put the hanger together again and suspend it in an airy spot.

One way to avoid mud tracks on an entry hall floor is to place a practical holder near the door. To make this cut a sturdy cardboard carton down to a two inch depth, then cover it with self adhesive vinyl coated yardage. This will catch the dirty drips from rubbers and galoshes, and can be wiped off with a clean cloth dipped into soap or detergent suds, and can be stored in a closet on sunny days.

HANDLE MEDICINE WITH CARE

A communication from Alice Teddlie, Louisiana Cooperative Extension Service family life specialist, gives some good advice to you, Mrs. Homemaker, on medicine. In this communication she says medicine, like dynamite, can be powerful, good or bad, depending on how you use it. A prescription is for one patient, one purpose, and one period of illness. That you, Mrs. Homemaker, should never share your medicine with another person even if he seems to have your symptoms. He may have a different illness or he may be allergic to the drug. Be sure to remember that a prescription is for a person and not for a disease.

COLLEGE FRESHMEN

If you, Miss College Freshman, are not sure what the college supplies, it is better to be underprepared than to arrive with equipment and supplies not needed. Most colleges are explicit about what furnishings they supply in a dormitory room, what is available for rent and what is prohibited. Students are usually expected to supply bedspreads, draperies, and curtains along with sheets, pillowcases, blankets and towels. Dormitory decorating is usually a joint effort. So it is a good idea for a freshman student to correspond or talk with the future roommate. Ideas can be exchanged about colors, decorating and space-saving arrangements such as one to bring record player and the other a radio.

Here are some important factors to remember: All furnishings and accessories should be durable enough to last four years, should be packable for annual trips home, should be, if possible, machine washable especially spreads, draperies etc.

The bed is the focal point and its cover is usually the color guide for other furnishings. A tailored spread sturdy enough to endure a lot of laundry and lounging is preferable. Durable press spreads are the upcoming favorite of students. These are pre-shrunk, machine washable and never need ironing when tumbled dried. You, Miss Freshman, will need to buy six sheets—two in use, two in the laundry and two to spare.

A THOUGHT

BURMA REPORT

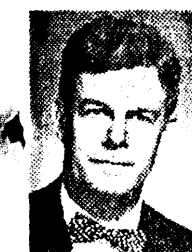

LONDON (AP)—Fears that missionary work in Burma would collapse because of recent government actions there are "completely unfounded," says Canon David Paton, an Anglican missionary leader.

Although the Burmese government a year ago ordered all foreign missionaries who had come there since 1948 to get out, Canon Paton said the nationalization of the churches there had brought them new life rather than decline.

sometimes in parks and street plantings. Crape myrtles are so very showy, however, that they are most effective as small trees. In summer, they are brilliant. In the Fall, they are gorgeous in their colored foliage, and, in winter, the trunks of the trees are lovely in contrast to the barks of other trees.

Southern Gardener

Crape Myrtle Pretty Sight

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

In the summer landscape, one flowering tree is worth a whole flower garden. During the crape myrtle season, the whole south could easily be one big garden if gardeners would only remember to plant these brilliant trees.

We are fortunate that one member of the big group of tropical and subtropical crape myrtles is hardy enough to stand up to our cold winter. The trees are seldom hurt by the cold except at the tips of the branches, and the fact that crape myrtles bloom on the new growth that comes out each year insures us of bloom on crape myrtles each and every season. If your crape myrtle does not flower, it is starving or in deep shade.

COLOR SCHEME

We have never really given much thought to the planning of crape myrtle color groups. With lavender, three or more shades of pink, three or four shades of red, white and a deep maroon to times kept down to the size of choose from, we still do not know how to do it. When this is done, groups can be planted in groups which could be stunning closer proximity as is done

...On Dit...

by Marillyn Taylor

This week it gives equal time for patriots. Front pages are regularly dominated by young people of unruly habits, unbecoming dress, and unsocial habits. In this column we propose to defend American youth of a different breed: we salute the National Society, Children of the American Revolution.

Monroe's BETSY TAYLOR is now serving as CAR's national librarian - curator. In the past weeks we have accompanied her as she paid official visits to regional meetings around the U. S.: Mid - Western in Indianapolis; Eastern in Newburgh, New York; Mid - Atlantic in Charlottesville, Va.; and Southeastern in Sarasota, Fla.

At each of these places we met CAR representatives from a total of 26 states. We were proud of all of them: neatly dressed girls; combed, barbered, clean shaven boys. CAR members can be of any age from birth to 21. Included in the group are very young children who like dressing up in colonial costumes; college age men who plan a career in law and/or government. Those who attend regional meetings are usually older members, high school and college students. But we saw one CAR just nine months old. And what can these divergent ages have in common? An interest in the U. S. A.

Each meeting opens with the Pledge of Allegiance, national anthem, American's Creed and CAR creed. The last contains the line "I have a definite work to do for my country." CAR are serious about this—national projects and programs, always operating on various interest levels, are planned toward a contribution to the community as well as education for the member. National Society CAR helps to maintain several historic shrines. State and local societies have year - round programs promoting patriotic holidays; encouraging correct use of the flag; helping with various civic activities and campaigns. In such a varied program, there is no room for topics political or controversial, only an emphasis on American heritage.

'Tis a pleasure to attend a workshop where CAR study the proposed program for the year, pool ideas, ask questions, and seek advice. One young man, in making suggestions regarding a conservation program, told of an anti - litter campaign called "Operation CRUD" (Committee for Removal of Unsightly Debris). Those taking part in the clean streets promotion appeared at City Hall in most respectable attire, carrying picket signs with such slogans as "Make the Streets Make It Clean." Needless to say, this appealed to the young people and the area press and effectively dramatized the anti - litter campaign.

CAR conferences have their serious side, but also the fun program. Usually the meetings begin in the evening with registration, followed by an informal party: a square dance, a swim, a hullabaloo. The business session is next morning, followed by luncheon and an afternoon tour. Final event is usually a dinner dance, which may or may not be preceded by a reception honoring national officers.

One of the most interesting parts of the program is the tour. This is planned on the fun part of the meeting, but is also sugar - coated education. Each tour gives the CAR an opportunity to learn more about the American way of life. And each does this in a different way.

At our first stop, Indianapolis, the tour was to the Speedway, home of the 500. Here is an antique car museum, fascinating to our young men. The group returned to the hotel by way of Indiana's war memorial, with a stop at Benjamin Harrison's late - Victorian mansion.

In Newburgh, history goes further back. Here we visited New Windsor Cantonment, site of George Washington's last permanent camp. There are some original buildings, some restorations, and a demonstration of colonial firearms.

In the tiny museum is a display of Revolutionary uniforms and muskets. There is a glass case filled with a toy soldier regiment depicting the Continental army en route to battle. A display of various awards for valor includes the original Purple Heart, presented to Sgt. Elijah Churchill by General Washington.

Hats Return To

Fashion Scene

With Jaunty Air

By FLORENCE DE SANTIS

Everyone in Paris is wearing young hats these days, marked by a jaunty air and usually a color or fabric theme that's unusual.

Helmets of the African or safari kind are done in vividly colored cotton satin. Puffy berets are in vivid pink and violet checks or in black and white ones of various sizes on the same hat.

Engagements Are Revealed

ARRANT-MCGREW

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. McGrew, West Monroe, announce the engagement of their daughter, Patricia Ann to James Charles Arrant, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Arrant, also of West Monroe. The wedding is planned for mid-September in the home of the bride's parents with Rev. Roy Plurly officiating.

Miss Ginger Caples has been chosen to serve as maid of honor and best man will be Roger Rutledge.

CAR can plant a tree or write an essay or enter the oratorical contest.

Three young college men from Virginia, each of whom sings and plays, have prepared a program on "History of the Banjo." Including songs of different eras, this is a very interesting presentation for luncheon meetings or banquets. In an age when patriotism is somewhat old hat, it is refreshing to find a group with such wholehearted interest.

The bride-elect is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Owens and W. L. McGrew. She was graduated from West Monroe high school and Louisiana Business College. Mr. Arrant is the grandson of Mrs. J. A. Arrant. He graduated from West Monroe high school and is now stationed with the Air Force at Amarillo AFB, Amarillo, Texas where the couple will reside.

KIMBALL-FERGUSON

A September 3 bride-elect is Miss Barbara Elaine Ferguson, whose marriage to Sgt. Thomas Marion Kimball Jr., will take place in the First Baptist Church of Wisner.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. John W. Ferguson of Wisner and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas M. Kimball.

You've lasted a year.

True, you've changed. You're a little thin, worn, frayed around the edges and your color is a bit weak . . . you don't look nearly as good as you did in the store. But you're still in one piece . . . Sorry, Trend House doesn't sell "bargain carpet" that has to fight for sheer survival. We know the only place bargain carpet lasts is under the bed. When we select carpet we carefully avoid those that skimp, cut corners and use inferior yarns or weak dyes. We only allow our name to be identified with quality carpets that will look as good as new on their first birthday and continue to look good for many, many birthdays to come. To put it purely and simply, the carpet we sell must give long lasting value.

Hoffa Ally Tells Of Try To Discredit Garrison

CHICAGO (AP)—A codefendant of James Hoffa, imprisoned Teamsters Union president testified that a former Justice Department aide of Robert F. Kennedy offered him evidence in exchange for his help in discrediting Jim Garrison, New Orleans District Attorney.

Zachary "Red" Strate, a New Orleans builder, was called to the witness stand at the hearing ordered by the U.S. Supreme Court to determine whether illegally obtained government evidence was instrumental in the 1964 conviction of Hoffa and six others, including Strate.

Strate said he met Walter Sheridan June 12 at a New Orleans hotel. He said the meeting was arranged by Judge Malcolm O'Hara.

"Walter Sheridan offered me evidence of government bugging," Strate said, "so I could get a new trial at my hearing in Chicago, in exchange for helping to discredit Dist. Atty. Jim Garrison."

Strate quoted Sheridan as saying, "I wonder that you have the nerve to meet with me. None of Hoffa's acquaintances ever will talk to me. Why don't you let me help you in Chicago?"

Strate said he was the builder of Miami's plush Fountainbleau Hotel, told Judge Richard B. Austin of U.S. District Court, "we left without agreeing to anything."

"I thought the Supreme Court had given me enough information to get a new trial," Strate said.

In response to a question from Maurice Walsh, chief counsel for Hoffa, Strate said, "I gather Sheridan was working for Robert Kennedy. He said he was interested in stopping the probe of the Kennedy assassination in New Orleans."

The first witness called by the defense was Herbert J. Miller, assistant attorney general under Kennedy in 1964.

Miller testified that he had never ordered electronic eavesdropping during his term in office. He also testified that he did not see a log of an overheard conversation between S. George Burris, a codefendant, and Benjamin Sigelbaum of Miami.

That conversation resulted in the Supreme Court order for a hearing.

Miller said he first saw the log a few months ago and noted that at the time of the wiretapping, Dec. 2, 1963, the report was routed to Sheridan who was an assistant to Miller.

Miller also testified that he could not say whether Sheridan had ever seen the log because Sheridan was assigned the first three months of 1964 to Chattanooga, Tenn., where Hoffa was being tried on charges of jury tampering.

Sheridan, presently employed as an investigative reporter for the National Broadcasting Co., was primarily responsible for an hour-long program June 20 on the Garrison probe.

The telecast questioned the ethics and procedures followed by Garrison and criticized the evidence gathered against Clay L. Shaw, 54, who was charged with conspiracy to murder the president.

Following the program, Garrison charged Sheridan with attempted bribery of a witness. Sheridan was ordered to appear before a grand jury but a federal court suit is blocking his appearance.

An attorney for Sheridan, Herbert J. Miller Jr. of Washington D.C., branded Strate's testimony about the meeting "an absolute falsehood." Miller said he was head of the Justice Department's criminal division at the time of the meeting.

Miller said the meeting did take place at the time and location Strate indicated, and that it was arranged by Judge O'Hara. However, he said, Strate's version of what happened "is absolutely false."

Asked why the judge sought to bring the two men together, Miller replied: "I suggest you ask Judge O'Hara about that."

"Why is a criminal judge running around setting up meetings," Miller asked rhetorically. "That's an interesting question."

Salvation Army Duty Explained

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is another in a series of articles on the participating agencies of the United Givers Fund. Today's article is on the Salvation Army.)

By CAPT. R. C. GREENE
Commanding Officer

"Compassion in action" — that aptly describes the work of the Salvation Army.

Most feel compassion for their needy neighbors. But over the years, the Salvation Army has shown how to energize that feeling into a program of positive action on many fronts. Through its total ministry, the Salvation Army encourages spiritual growth and wholesome family life.

The skid-row shelters maintained by the Salvation Army are famous. Yet how many of us are aware of all the diverse services offered by the Army?

Across the nation, the Salvation Army operates summer camps for children, young people participating in Salvation Army year-round programs, and elderly men and women with marginal incomes.

Salvation Army officers act as trusted liaisons between hundreds of prison inmates and their families. The Army's employment program in many areas works discreetly to find jobs that will help keep ex-inmates out of jail permanently.

Thousands of confused, unhappy young girls have received medical care and understanding counsel at Salvation Army homes for unwed mothers. And the Army's hospitals are among the finest in the nation.

The Salvation Army even operates missing persons bureaus in all the states of the U. S. and in a number of countries overseas. Last year our local post helped to find several persons.

All the bureaus cooperate in diligently tracking down any and all clues to the whereabouts of missing family members, runaway boys and girls, missing heirs, etc. Just recently, a 17-year-old run-away was brought to the captain's office, and the next day a 79-year-old run-away was brought in. The young girl revealed where she lived and after several phone calls, transportation was arranged for her return trip home. A call to the local police department about the 79-year-old lady turned up the fact that she had run away from one of the local nursing homes.

In all of these programs, there has been great success and this has brought happiness to many families who could never have afforded private investigative services on this worldwide scale.

The Salvation Army has many more essential — yet little known — services, and more such programs are planned for the future. But just what is being done locally? Let us take a look behind the Red Shield of Services.

When a man feels the pain of hunger, he has little thought for anything else. That is why the first step in helping him is to let him help himself to a good hearty meal. Whether he is a homeless alcoholic, a recently discharged prisoner, or an out-of-work laborer, when he comes to the Salvation Army, he starts off with plenty of nourishing food — and an all-out attack on his problem. If a transient finds a job locally, the Army will give this man room and board until he gets his first pay check.

During 1966, some 7,770 men, women and children received aid in the form of meals, (14,050), lodging (7,376), and 765 garments from the clothing room in the local Lodge. Over a score of individuals received medical aid.

Perhaps the best known of the Army's services is its great work with alcoholics. In fact, there are many people who think that the Salvation Army's social service is its ministry to those with drinking problems. Although it is only one of many social welfare activities, this service to alcoholics is a large and complex one. The Salvation Army maintains two types of institutions caring for alcoholics — The Harbor Light Centers and the Men's Social Service Centers. During 1966, a small Social Center was opened at the Corps Transient Lodge. The basic services are spiritual counseling, recreation, and work therapy.

MORE

The work therapy program is one of the unusual factors in these Salvation Army centers. It involves collecting items, such as used clothing and furniture, sorting them, repairing some, and selling the processed materials. Rags and scrap iron are sorted and sold to dealers. Usable clothing, furniture and household goods are sold at moderate cost in the Army's Thrift Stores. So the program benefits not only those directly involved, but also the low-income families who are able to obtain basic necessities without the stigma of charity. All proceeds help to support the Men's Social Service Centers.

All local welfare needs are taken care of first, and then the overage is sold in the Thrift Stores. Last year over 18,000 garments and shoes plus furniture were given to needy families.

Right now your Salvation Army is working to prevent family and personal problems from becoming community problems. They give financial, medical, employment and housing aid to hundreds. A desire to give hope and renewed faith for the future underlies the give-

ONE OF the most rewarding moments for a Salvation Army worker is to bring smile of happiness to the face of a child. The Salvation Army provides food, clothing, shelter, kindness and understanding to children of all ages in need of help. One of the biggest joys each Christmas Season for many children is when the Salvation Army Worker arrives with food, clothing and toys.

At the Monroe Corps youth groups are meeting regularly. There are the Sunbeam, Girl Guard and Boy Scouts. There are the youth band and the Sunday School classes, as well as craft classes, game room and activities plus outside activities.

In 1966 a total of 791 adult and youth meetings were held, with an attendance of 22,033. In 1966 a total of 791 adult and youth meetings were held, with an attendance of 22,033.

hints from Heloise

DEAR FOLKS:

Here is something I have learned that I am sure some of you will profit by, especially when buying carpets or room-size rugs for your home or apartment.

If you have a fireplace and your rug man wants to cut a square out of the rug to fit around the hearth, DON'T let him!

Instead of cutting the piece out entirely, why not slash two slits and fold the piece UNDER the rug itself. It will lie flat... IF you cut out a matching size piece of the pad underneath the rug.

You can piece the rug pad twenty times with no expense on your part and it won't show, but it will cost lots to have that little cut-out piece of carpet replaced properly by an expert rug man when you move. And the mend usually shows.

If you never move—always keep in mind that eventually the carpet might get so worn (or go out of style) that you will want to move it to another room. Then all you have to do is mend two little slits—instead of that hard-to-mend square—and replace that patch out of your pad.

This also works on carpets that go around floor furnaces, central or wall heaters and air conditioners, crooked corners, etc.

Never cut a piece out anywhere if it can be turned under by using this slit method. It will save you money in the long run.

Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I cut small pieces of old nylons, tie some moth crystals in them and hang a couple of "bags" in my piano to discourage the moths. It does, too.

Mary Mahry

DEAR HELOISE:

Here's a little something that might help those who don't have double boilers (which take up space, too).

If they want to make seven-minute icing for a cake, or anything that might call for a double boiler... wad up some aluminum foil (this is one place to use leftover foil) and put it in the bottom of a pan. Then cover the foil with water.

After bringing the water to a boil, place your smaller pan containing the icing into the boiling water and it will rest on the crushed foil.

This will keep the top pan from touching the bottom of the larger pan. It's a honey for a substitute double boiler.

Cookie Love

Your idea was great for making a double boiler. It works beautifully.

Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

When I first moved into a mobile home, I was at a loss as to where I would sprinkle clothes because of the limited space.

I disliked the idea of having to wipe up water that accidentally sprinkled on the floor.

I finally thought of a perfectly marvelous place to dampen the clothes—the bathtub (clean, of course)!

Carole Nelson

DEAR HELOISE:

Instead of using a plastic bag for drying lettuce, why not let your net bag come into use again?

Swing the wet lettuce in a net bag... that way you can dry the lettuce, get a shower, and water the back lawn all at once!

A Reader

DEAR HELOISE:

I think that you should tell all your readers to go to the pet department in their dime or drug store, and buy a box of bird gravel.

Dump about an inch of this into the bottom of each ash tray in your car!

All one has to do then is just put your cigarette down into this gravel, without even taking your eyes off the road, and it will snuff itself out.

Any time you clean your ash tray, just pick out the stubs, leaving the ashes in among the bird gravel... which I find helps put the cigarette out even quicker.

I don't think there's anything worse than having a cigarette smolder while riding in a car.

Kenneth Long

DEAR HELOISE:

Put a strong curtain rod (round ones are best) on the inside of your closet door.

Hang tablecloths and other flat work on the rod to keep from wrinkling.

This also saves closet space and prevents crushing them.

Mrs. Abe Abna

DEAR HELOISE:

Here is a hint I have found helpful.

When I add a little lemon or lime juice to diet cola or pre-sweetened powdered drink mixes, it takes away that artificially sweetened taste.

HINTSAVING TRICK

DEAR HELOISE:

I really look forward to your hints each Sunday, and have learned a lot of new little time-savers.

I cut out all the hints I want to keep and stick them in a notebook. If I don't have time for that, I simply roll them around a cardboard tube and put them back in an aluminum-foil box until later.

Freda Osborn

DEAR HELOISE:

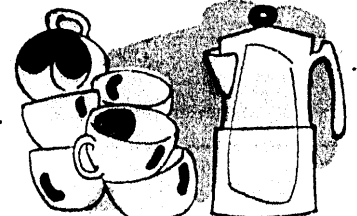

I put an adhesive-backed bandage over the head of my hammer.

This is especially good when hammering delicate nails or upholstery tacks.

If one should miss the tack or nail, it will prevent a horrible mark on the woodwork or walls.

Sally Decker

PERKED TO A "T"

DEAR HELOISE:

Like your tea made from loose tea, but dislike the straining mess?

Measure one teaspoon of leaf tea into your electric percolator basket for every cup of water in the pot. Set on medium and let brew as for coffee.

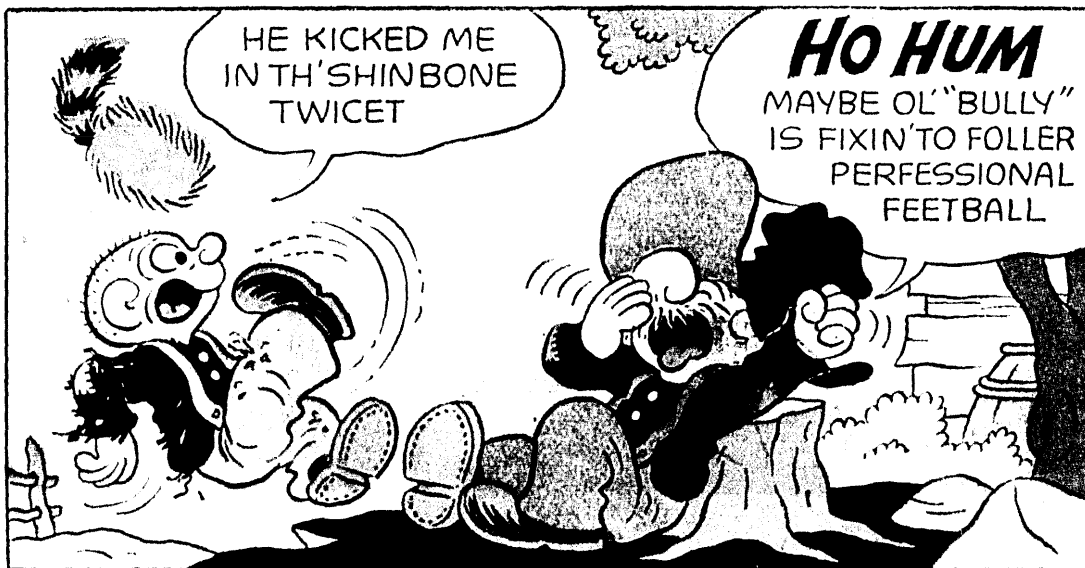

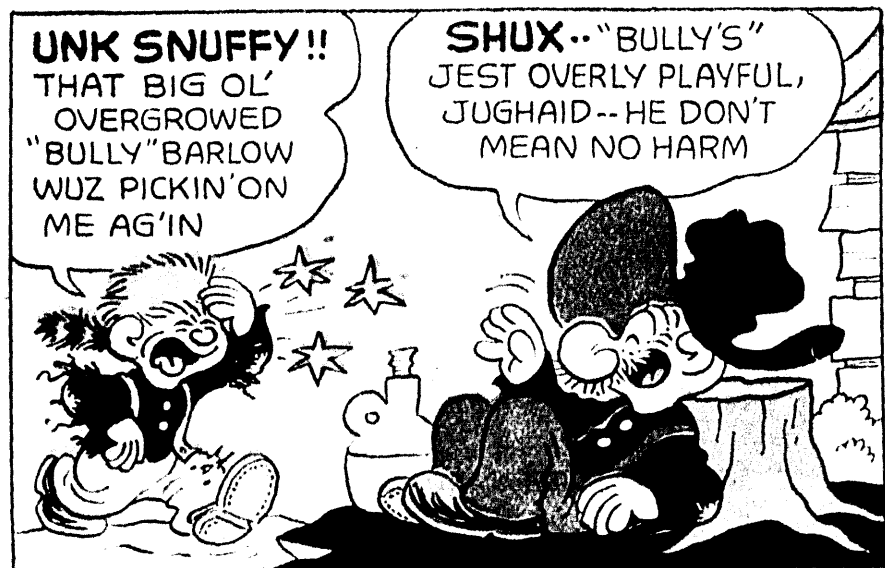

Delicious, and it stays hot longer than in a tea pot.
